STRYCHNINE SUICIDE BY WOMAN AT TONGORE

Davis Says His Wife Sprinkled Poison on Bread and Ate it and That He Knocked the Poison Out of Her Hand too Late---Authorities are Investigating.

Sylvia Shurter, wife of Elvin Davis of Tongore, died Tuesday evening in convulsions resulting from strychnine which had been eaten on bread and butter at the beginning of her evening meal at her home.

Her husband, who was at the table with her, says she took the poison with suicidal intent, and that he knocked the bottle out of her hand to the floor, also knocking from her hand the unfinished slice of bread and butter on which she had sprinkled the poison, the partly-eaten slice falling to the floor where it was consumed by a dog and a cat, both of which died.

The Davis's have been married about a year. A little more than a year ago Davis's first wife died at the Benedictine Sanitarium in this city of pneumonia.

According to Davis's story, he and his wife sat down to the supper table and his wife was eating a slice of bread when she reached into her lap, or under the table, and produced a small bottle, at the same time telling him it contained poison and she had taken some of it.

He says he knocked the bottle from her hand, and also knocked from her hand the unfinished slice of bread and butter. He mixed up ginger and hot water and also the whites of several eggs and tried to administer them to her, but he says she refused to take either. He called several neighbors and also telephoned to Dr. J. D. W. Dumond at West Shokan. The neighbors placed her on a lounge in the room, where she died shortly afterwards in convulsions. She was dead when Dr. Dumond arrived, and at 9:30 o'clock the doctor notified Coroner H. Lee Breithaupt that she had committed suicide.

Coroner Breithaupt went to Tongore at once. The body of Mrs. Davis was lying on the lounge where she had died. The table in the dining room contained the dishes and food which had been placed there for supper. The plate at Mrs. Davis's place was turned upside down, and around the edges Coroner Breithaupt noticed several flecks of white powder. A bottle containing a strychnine label was standing on the table, with the cork in the top. About one-sixth of the contents were missing. The bottle was round, of yellowish glass, and ordinarily would contain about sixty grains of strychnine. The label was that of Merck & Company, manufacturing chemists, whose preparations are sold extensively by the drug trade.

The bottle was taken by Coroner Breithaupt and this afternoon was delivered at the district attorney's office.

During the night an autopsy was performed on Mrs. Davis's body by Dr. Henry Van Hoevenberg of this city, assisted by Dr. J. D. W. Dumond. The contents of the stomach were brought to Kingston early this morning by Dr. Van Hoevenberg and delivered to Dr. Raymond Sanderson, county pathologist, for chemical examination at the county bacteriological laboratory.

The purchase of strychnine without a physician's prescription is possible at any drug store, all that is required being a statement by the purchaser of the intention to which the poison is to be put, and also information regarding the purchaser's residence, etc., and the signature of the purchaser acknowledging the receipt of the poison.

Mrs. Davis before her marriage lived in Samsonville, where she was born and was well known.

Davis is a son of Nathan Davis, formerly constable of the town of Olive, whose reputation in several local cases caused him to call himself a "Loolakookasoola," by which he is best known. Davis pleaded guilty in October, 1911, to a charge of having stolen an engine owned by one of the sub-contractors under Winston & Company at Brown's Station, which he dumped into a pond, where it was found some time after its disappearance had been discovered.

District Attorney Traver is investigating the circumstances of the case.

For Civilian Relief Fund.

The Loyal Friends' Aid Society will hold a picnic and dance at Kingston Point Thursday afternoon and evening, the proceeds of which will be for the benefit of the Civilian Relief Fund. The members of the society will have supper at the park and afterwards will hold a public dance at the Kingston Point Casino.

Drowned in Catskill Creek.

May Keehan of New York, visiting at Maple Rest, Leeds, was drowned while wading in Catskill creek Monday afternoon. Miss Keehan waded out into deep water and was drowned before help could be given.

SCHANTZ A CANDIDATE.

Lloyd Supervisor Seeks Nomination For County Treasurer.

Supervisor Philip Schantz of Highland has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for county treasurer of Ulster county. It is understood that there are other aspirants, but so far as The Freeman knows they have not yet declared themselves in print. Mr. Schantz is one of the best known residents of the county. There is no difference of opinion regarding the fact that he is thoroughly capable and honest. He has always been one of the bulwarks of the Republican party, never hesitating to contribute to it liberally both time and money. Mr. Schantz's supporters are emphasizing the point that it is seldom all of these things can be said truthfully of one man.

GANDER BAY CLUB WRECKED.

Lost Supplies, Boat Capsized and the Clambake Was Not.

The first clambake of the Gander Bay Club of Ponckhockie that was to have been held on Tuesday at Kruger's Island up the Hudson river, cannot exactly be termed a success, although the club started for the island in Captain Webster Burhan's motorboat, Marie, that day.

When near Barrytown a large steamer passed the Marie and the swells were so heavy they rolled over the motorboat and before the club could grasp the chickens, clams and other food products destined for the bake they were washed overboard. In fact so heavy were the swells that the Marie itself capsized and the gallant club were hurled into the river.

Fortunately they were all able to swim, and had presence of mind enough to grasp hold of the capsized boat, and headed her shoreward. When beached the Marie was turned right side up and after the club had dried out somewhat the trip back home was started. It was 10 o'clock that night before they finally reached home hungry and wet through by the rain.

SUBMARINE CREW PREPARE TO SAIL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Baltimore, Md., July 26—German diplomacy today joined German enterprise and daring in seeking to clear the way for the safe sailing of the super-submarine Deutschland on her perilous return trip to Germany. Count von Bernstoff, German ambassador, took a hand in the frantic efforts of German agents here to find a solution for the dilemma which has kept the big submarine moored closely at her dock for days, despite her readiness to sail and the anxiety of her commander to get away.

German Consul Carl Leuderitz and Paul Hilken, agent of the submarine line which owns the Deutschland, talked with the ambassador over the long distance telephone today. The ambassador has been asked to come to Baltimore to look over the situation for himself, and if he decides against making the trip, he is expected to send Prince von Hatzfeldt, counsellor of the embassy, or some other representative. Upon the conferences and tonight's visit depend the decision as to whether the Deutschland is to remain in port indefinitely, awaiting word from her missing sister ship Bremen. If the ambassador decides that nothing can be gained by waiting, the super-submarine will leave Baltimore as soon as possible before any more Allied warships can be concentrated in her path.

Captain Hinsch, port captain of the submarine line, has disappeared from his usual haunts after bidding good-bye to the officers of the Deutschland. It was believed Captain Hinsch had started for Hampton Roads on a scouting expedition to ascertain definitely just what conditions will confront the Deutschland when she starts her dash for the open sea. He is also expected to determine what Allied naval force must be evaded by the under-sea boat. Captain Hinsch's report is expected to have much to do in determining how and when the Deutschland will sail. Reports today that a British cruiser was even invading the three-mile limit on watch for the Deutschland were received with interest by the German agents.

The screen of barges and burlap curtains surrounding the Deutschland at her dock were carefully gone over today and every tiny peephole that might afford a glimpse of the submarine was patched. The burlap curtains were enlarged to stretch from the top of the barge to the waterline and after the work was done the Deutschland was completely invisible. The work was done before dawn and it was the only activity that could be discerned about the submarine throughout the night although the tug Timmins kept her usual watch with her searchlight sweeping the harbor.

Officers of the Deutschland and the entire crew got into their working clothes today. The officers donned their gray uniforms and the crew put on the heavy, yellow gray oilskins which are the garb of every sailor on the undersea merchantman. Several wagonloads of clean laundry were delivered to the submarine by a local cleaning establishment. The clean clothing was hailed with delight, for the crew had been waiting for it for nearly two weeks.

A constant stream of visitors to the dock today bade the crew farewell. Red cheeked, flaxen haired buxom German girls held sly conversations with their chosen heroes in little nooks of the big pier structure. Gray haired old women with paper-bound bundles that looked suspiciously like home baked pies and cakes delivered their substantial good-bye presents to officers and men. And more than one tear stained face turned away from the dock after a hearty "Auf Wiedersehn" to the husky German sailors who will go down to the sea in the Deutschland. Captain Koenig and his crew have become community heroes in Baltimore, and their worshippers were demonstrative in their farewells.

VENIZELOS FLOUTS KING.

Athens, July 26.—Former Premier Venizelos openly challenges King Constantine's expressed belief that Germany cannot be defeated. Venizelos quotes an interview given by the king to a newspaper representative last January, in which the monarch declared that the war would result in a draw.

"Who is now so blinded by prejudices," asks the statesman, "that he still believes in German victory? Who today, after the reorganization of the Russian army and the organization of Kitchener's army, by which England is raised to the rank of a great military power, still imagines that the war can be ended by a bastard peace in which there will be neither victor nor vanquished?"

In the interview referred to by former Premier Venizelos, King Constantine said:

"If economic exhaustion does not force Germany to sue for peace, I beleive it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to conquer her in a military way."

Asked as to what he believed would be the outcome of the war, the king replied: "A draw; don't you?"

STREET CAR STRIKE SPREADS TO BRONX

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 26.—The Yonkers street car strike spread to the Bronx today and practically every surface car in the northern and western part of the borough was tied up. The lines connecting with Yonkers were first tied up and then those connecting with the cross town routes.

Thousands of persons had to hire vehicles or walk for miles through the hot, humid morning to subway and elevated lines which would carry them to their work in downtown New York.

Officials of the railways asked for strong police protection, saying that they would attempt to establish normal traffic conditions during the day.

Poughkeepsie Milkmen in Trouble.

Joseph Silber, Paul Beck, Ernest Beck and H. A. Beck, milkmen in Poughkeepsie, are in trouble over the alleged use of another milkman's milk bottles. Search warrants issued on the strength of affidavits of Mathilda Brenner, milk dealer, and Walter Bennett and Ira Travis, agents for the state department of agriculture, will result in the criminal prosecution of the four milkmen. It is alleged that the agents bought a bottle labeled "Maple Place Farm" filled with milk from each of the four men.

Official Convention Stenographer.

Harold A. Styles of this city has been appointed official stenographer of the police chiefs convention which convened this afternoon at the city hall, and which will remain in session until Thursday.

Union Prayer Service.

The First Dutch Church and the Fair Street Reformed Church will unite in a prayer meeting service at the Fair Street Reformed Church on Thursday evening. Interesting reports will be given by the delegates who recently attended the New York state Sunday school convention at Albany.

BRITISH CLAIM ANOTHER SUCCESS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 26.—After seventy-two hours of savage fighting the British have succeeded in occupying all of the village of Pozieres, on the Somme battle front.

News of the complete capture of Pozieres was contained in the official report issued by the British war office at noon today.

The Germans, occupying stone houses which had been turned into fortresses, fought stubbornly, but were finally driven out after the Australians had secured a lodgment in the western part of the village.

(Pozieres is about six miles southwest of Bapaume. It lies at the junction of the Albert-Bapaume and Thiepval-Longueval roads.)

Westward of Pozieres territorial troops captured two German trenches. The prisoners taken included five officers.

Heavy cannonading on the Somme front continues.

ONE DAY'S RECORD.

Wheat and Chaff From the Grist of the B. S. L.

The new opera house will not be built because of the threatening aspect of infantile paralysis cases in Greater New York.

The new opera house will be built because of the united support uptown merchants are giving to the project and the financing of the same.

The new theater will be built on one side of the West Shore tracks with the proposed new station. By the lowering of the tracks, the new entrance will be an easy incline.

Because of nickels now being valued at six cents, they are being melted up by the trolley companies and five and ten cent stores so that a theatre ought to make money at a nickel admission charge.

Cold light will be used in the proposed opera house it is said once the cold cash is forthcoming to make it a cold fact. Hot air is not an illuminant.

The scheme has fallen through because of an uncle of one of the prospective subscribers to stock having been swallowed by a shark while bathing on the Jersey coast last Sunday.

With the theatre announcement a veritable wave of building struck the uptown section. A new department store, a factory and in short everything but a gas house was soon in process of construction. The Stove Pipe committee is planning the largest chimney and the greatest volume of smoke.

No New Cases Reported.

No new case of infantile paralysis has developed in Kingston up to noon today. There is one suspected case, which has been previously reported, and it is still being closely watched to see if it develops symptoms of the dread disease. No stone is being left unturned by Dr. Frank A. Johnston, the local health officer, to prevent an outbreak of the disease in Kingston.

STORM ARRESTS POLICE CHIEFS

A Score or More Believed to be Held by the Storm Somewhere Along the Roads Leading to Kingston—Formal Opening of the Convention.

Stalled in a driving rainstorm somewhere within a thirty mile radius of Kingston are believed to be a score of chiefs of police from various cities of the state, all heading for this city and the opening of the 17th annual convention of their State Association at city hall this afternoon. Arrivals by automobile and train up to 3 o'clock this afternoon numbered about forty members of the association and with about half as many ladies in attendance as guests. Informal receptions were tendered officers of the association at the hotels during the noon hour.

Because of the bad weather, it was thought probably that the promised trip around the Ashokan reservoir would have to be given up.

A gathering of more than 100 persons assembled for the formal opening of the convention at the common council chambers in city hall where Mayor Palmer Canfield, Jr., delivered the address of welcome, saying in part:

"It may seem strange and inconsistent to state that I have traveled further than anyone present to attend this convention but it is true as I have been attending a convention in the western end of the state from which I detached myself in the company of the governor.

"You gentlemen all know a worker is one who works and a welcomer is one who welcomes, and in the latter capacity I feel honored with the position of official municipal welcomer when I consider those whom I welcome. Realizing that the city is peculiarly and unusually safe in your hands I will not reluctantly hand you a small key that will unlock nothing whatever but instead a real key whose size befits that of the city and the strength of your organization and the hospitality and welcome of the city that is yours. This key will not only afford you a means of entrance to our city but will place you in control and possession of it. Whosoever is entitled to act as your representative may fasten it to his key ring if he so desires."

At this stage, the mayor presented President Singleton with a key properly labelled and then proceeded to give the delegates a most interesting historical sketch of the city of Kingston from its foundation. He laid stress upon the standing of the profession followed by his hearers and its development from the watch of old to its modern efficiency and usefulness. Speaking of their duties, the mayor said in conclusion:

"That which concerns the order of the community is imparted to the community through you. Being the chief, leadership is expected of you in connection with the police. One will find in the person of the chief, as you must find if he is really chief within the meaning of the word, the exercise of understanding, the capacity to understand human nature, the possession of sound judgment, and also an information bureau and criminologist of no mean order, versed in criminal law and in the knowledge of the underworld, and yet ever practicing courtesy and civility.

"We are pleased to welcome you to our city, considering that you represent this important function in connection with the administration of public affairs. We admit you within the city portals willingly and cheerfully. You are free to come and enjoy all the freedom from official responsibilities within the city, its officials and people, can bestow.

"Thus we salute thee with an early song.
"And welcome thee, and wish thee long!"

Mayor Canfield's hearty welcome was greeted with warm applause. A suitable response was made by President Singleton. In behalf of the board of police commissioners, President Leighton of the Chamber of Commerce also made a brief speech of welcome.

In his annual address, President Singleton reviewed the history of the year for the organization as follows:

"In opening the seventeenth annual convention of the New York State Association of Chiefs of Police, I will say it gives me much pleasure to see so many of the old members with us this year, also it is gratifying to me to see the new faces which are about to affiliate with us in our work, showing that a greater interest is being taken in the association in the state at present than in the past. And, as my predecessor said in his annual message last year, I am proud of this, and it is my desire as I know it is the aim of every member present, to see the head of every police department in this state active members of our association.

"I do not believe it is necessary for me to repeat the object of this association to the older members, but to the new members I wish to say that its primary object is to build up an official and mutual friendship between the several departments of police in the state of New York; to devise methods and suggest ways and means for the advancement of the same, and for the reading and discussing of papers

REV. P. S. BARINGER ACCEPTS CALL

New Pastor of Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Redeemer Assumes Pastorate September 1—Succeeds the Rev. H. E. Snyder.

The Rev. P. S. Baringer of Philadelphia, Pa., has accepted the unanimous call extended him by the congregation of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Redeemer on Wurts street, and will assume the pastorate the first of September. Pastor Baringer succeeds the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, who resigned to accept a call to Madison, Wisconsin.

Pastor Baringer preached in the church as a candidate some time ago, and made a decided impression, which led to a meeting of the congregation being held at which time it was voted to extend him a call to assume the work here in Kingston.

Word of his acceptance of the call has just been received by Fred J. Walter, secretary of the church council.

MATERIAL HERE FOR RONDOUT BRIDGE

Prospects of starting shortly the work of building the abutments for the proposed Sleightsburgh bridge began to brighten today when a carload of steel piling was received over the Ulster & Delaware railroad to be used in the construction work. The carload was unloaded onto a barge near the Island Dock. It will be remembered that the contract for building the abutments was awarded some time ago by the state highway department.

McClure to be Deported.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 26.—Samuel S. McClure, the New York publisher, who was temporarily refused permission to land at Liverpool, is to be deported. THRILLING ESCAPE AT CAMP WHITMAN

Camp Whitman, July 25.—(Special.)—Monday evening, while Captain Meagher and Lieutenant Dittus were sitting in front of the office tent conversing, a large limb of one of the apple trees in front of the tent fell without warning, and had it not been for the quick warning of the men in the cook shack, which enabled the two officers to seek safety, they would have been struck by the falling limb. Powerful Private "Bull" Kiernan, who had just arrived in camp from a visit home, was immediately put to work removing the debris, and after a few hours hard labor, removed the ruins.

Saturday night, at retreat, warrants were issued to the following: Sergeant Silas Beatty, Sergeant James Scott, Sergeant Clarence E. Miller, Corporal Clarence Brophy. These men were all appointed some time ago, and have been doing hard and efficient work, and were warmly congratulated by the entire company, as owing to their interest in the advancement of the men, each of them is very popular.

Sergeants Silas Beatty and James Scott have moved from their two man dog tent to the palatial shelter of the new snow white round tent lately erected. Whether their lately arrived warrants of promotion for efficiency in service made the comfortable little dog tent seem too undignified or what the reason is we do not know, but we wish Si and Jim all the comforts the camp affords, and wish a warrant of promotion would come to them every month.

We wish to thank the following very kindly for their generous donations: William O'Reilly, the popular Y. M. C. A. secretary, cigarettes, pipes and cigarettes; Tappen Camp, Sons of Veterans, and Ladies' Auxiliary, matches, cigarettes and tobacco; A. H. Gildersleeve, oranges; Mrs. Gilbert Hasbrouck, soap; Mrs. Irving Rose, jams, jellies, etc. The above will afford comfort and pleasure for the boys, who have been advised of the names of the givers, and are all very appreciative and thankful for being remembered in such a practical manner.

It is now rumored very strongly around camp that we are to hike to Peekskill next Monday for a week's rifle practice on the rifle range there, and then be transported to New York city, where we will encamp at Van Cortlandt Park, awaiting further orders from the war department.

Monday's Out-Door Show at Camp.

One of the best entertainments held in camp since the Tenth Regiment has been at Camp Whitman was staged in the open air amphitheater Monday night. Private George Rafferty, of Company M, who is master of ceremonies, did well in selecting the talent for the evening's show.

Company M was well represented on the platform, especially by Private Hiram Robinson, a clever boxer at 125 pounds. Robinson was matched against young Farrel of Albany, who has fought many professional bouts. The match was staged as a three round boxing exhibition, but had it gone four rounds, the Kingston soldier would have put the Albany boy to sleep. Robinson flooring Farrel three times in the third round, amid applause from the majority of the Tenth boys, who were pulling for the Kingston fighter.

Henry Sullivan, who has a splendid tenor voice, rendered several selections, which were well received. The singer was accompanied by the Tenth Regiment Band, which musical organization also rendered Major Chandler's famous Tenth Regiment Marching Song.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS.

Cut thin slices from the center of a good ham, cover with sour milk and let stand over night. In the morning rinse well with water and broil. Long cooking toughens the ham, as does standing after it is cooked.

Curry of Mutton or Lamb.—Brown a tablespoonful of minced onion and one teaspoonful of curry powder in two tablespoonfuls of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and brown thoroughly. Add one-half teaspoonful of chopped mint and two cupfuls of cooked, chopped lamb; stir for a minute to mix, then add two cupfuls of stock and cook until the sauce has thickened. Season and serve in a rice border.

Cherry Pie With Rose Leaves.—Line a deep pie dish with rice pastry. Fill with ripe stoned cherries, add a cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of flour; spread over top the petals from two or three roses, cover with crust and bake. Serve cold the same day it is baked.

Cream of Pea Soup.—Cook thoroughly one and a half cupfuls of shelled peas. Brown a slice of onion in one tablespoonful of butter, add the peas, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, one sprig of mint and one-half a bay leaf. Simmer 25 minutes or until tender, then press through a sieve. Scald three cupfuls of milk. Mix two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour together, then add a little milk, stir until smooth and add to the remainder of the milk. Stir and cook until thick, add a cupful of cream and the puree of peas. Season to taste, using parsley or celery salt, or both if liked. One-fourth of a cupful of finely chopped almonds is a most agreeable addition to all cream soups. Add for variety a cupful of finely shredded lettuce to the soup just before serving.

Creamed Sweetbreads. — Parboil them and carefully pick out every bit of fiber; then prepare a rich white sauce, seasoned with a touch of onion juice. Fill patty shells with the sauce mixed with the sweetbreads.

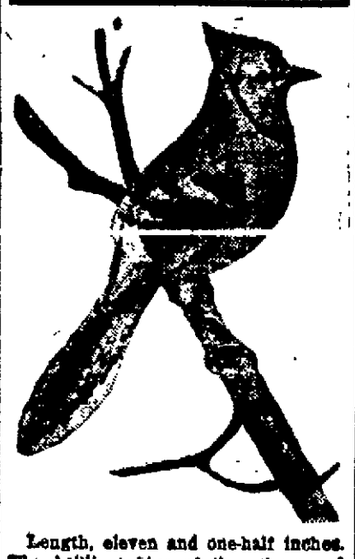
BLUE JAY

Cyanocitta cristata



Length, eleven and one-half inches. The brilliant blue of the wings and tail combined with the black crescent of the upper breast and the crested head distinguish this species.

Range: Resident in the eastern United States and southern Canada, west to the Dakotas, Colorado, and Texas.

Habits and economic status: The blue jay is of a dual nature. Cautious and silent in the vicinity of its nest, away from it it is bold and noisy. Sly in the commission of mischief, it is ever ready to scream "thief" at the slightest disturbance. As usual in such cases, its remarks are applicable to none more than itself, a fact neighboring nest holders know to their sorrow, for during the breeding season the jay lays heavy toll upon the eggs and young of other birds, and in doing so deprives us of the services of species more beneficial than itself. Approximately three-fourths of the annual food of the blue jay is vegetable matter, the greater part of which is composed of mast, i. e., acorns, chestnuts, beechnuts, and the like. Corn is the principal cultivated crop upon which this bird feeds, but stomach analysis indicates that most of the corn taken is waste grain. Such noxious insects as wood-boring beetles, grasshoppers, eggs of various caterpillars, and scale insects constitute about one-fifth of its food.

NOTICE OF CHATTEL MORTGAGE SALE.

By virtue of a chattel mortgage, made, executed and delivered by George C. Lasher to Caroline Lasher, on the 12th day of February, 1915, which said chattel mortgage was duly filed in the office of the town clerk of the town of Olive, on the 10th day of January, 1916, and a certificate or statement of renewal of which said mortgage was duly filed in the said town clerk's office on the 10th day of February, 1916, pursuant to section 235 of the lien law, I will expose for sale at public auction, and sell to the highest bidder on the 27th day of July, 1916, at 9:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at the meat market now or formerly occupied and conducted by the said George C. Lasher at Ashokan, in the town of Olive, Ulster county, New York, the following goods and chattels, to-wit:

HUGHES ALLIANCE LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN

Non-partisan Organization to Work With Republicans.

ITS OBJECTS SET FORTH.

The Hughes Alliance, a union of citizens of all political parties with the single object of aiding in the election of Charles E. Hughes to the presidency, was formally launched Wednesday night, July 19th, at an enthusiastic meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York City, attended by more than two hundred representative Democrats, Progressives and Republicans.

The occasion was the first meeting of the members of the General Committee of the Alliance, a body of some five hundred or more men, not chosen on a geographical basis, but representing every county in New York State. Particular significance attached to the meeting in that it was the first public meeting participated in by men of all parties who are ready and willing to subordinate all partisan and factional differences to the single end of joining hands in support of Charles E. Hughes. At the meeting the following officers were chosen:

McCook Is President.

Philip J. McCook, President, New York City; Ernest Cawcroft Treasurer, Jamestown, J. Adams Brown, Asst. Treasurer, New York City; Harold G. Aron, Secretary, New York City.

Vice-Presidents Joseph T. Alling, Rochester, Elmer B. Bryan, Hamilton, James Byrne, New York City, Wm. Hamlin Childs, Brooklyn; Stephen C. Clark, Cooperstown, Alphonso T. Clearwater, Kingston, Addison B. Colvin, Glens Falls, Robert Grier Cooke, New York City, J. L. Cunningham, Glens Falls, Charles M. Dow, Jamestown, Joseph G. Dudley, Buffalo, George E. Dunham, Utica; Chauncey J. Hamlin, Buffalo; Frederick E. Hazard, Syracuse; Robert W. Higbie, Queens, David Jayne Hill, Rochester, Elon H. Hooker, New York City; Virgil K. Kellogg, Watertown, Samuel McC. Lindsay, New York City; Nathan L. Miller, Syracuse; Adelbert Moot, Buffalo, John Lord O'Brian, Buffalo, Willis L. Ogden, New York City, E. H. Outerbridge, New York City, Dr. John Parmenter, Geneva, Frederick F. Peabody, Troy, Nathaniel Phillips, New York City, George Haven Putnam, New York City, Harold J. Richardson, Lowville, Dr. Charles A. Richmond, Schenectady, Albert L. Rohrer, Schenectady; William Cary Sanger, Sanger field, Wm. Jay Schieffelin, New York City, Jacob Gould Schurman, Ithaca, Henry H. Stebbins, Rochester; Henry L. Stimson, New York City, Oscar S. Straus, New York City, William J. Tully, Corning, Leonard Wallstein, New York City, George W. Wickersham, New York City, Ansley Wilcox, Buffalo; Henry A. Wise, New York City, Walter C. Witherbee, Port Henry.

The Executive Committee.

The following, in addition to the President, Treasurer, Assistant Treasurer and Secretary, will constitute the executive committee:

Mrs. George W. Wickersham, New York City, Miss Katherine B. Davis, New York City, Paul Shipman Andrews, Syracuse; Walter T. Arndt, New York City, Albert S. Bard, New York City, Geo. H. Bell, New York City, John B. Burnham, Essex; Arthur F. Cosby, New York City, Alfred C. Cove, Jr., New York City; Winfred T. Denison, New York City, Louis W. Fehr, New York City; Beveridge C. Dunlop, Spring Valley; Stanley Isaacs, New York City; Jacob J. Lesser, New York City, Langdon P. Marvin, New York City; Wm. Stanley Miller, Brooklyn; Robert S. Pelletreau, Patchogue, Robert Reed, New York City; Charles E. Sears, Buffalo; Cabot Ward, New York City.

As described at this meeting the utilization of the Hughes Alliance as an active cooperative agency in the present campaign is based on the fact that the candidacy of Governor Hughes makes a broad appeal to all Americans, irrespective of National party affiliations and likewise to the independent sentiment of the country, which is frequently ineffective and cannot, under ordinary circumstances be readily correlated to the work of party organizations. In every political campaign also there is a great deal of duplication of effort and lost energy as the result of a lack of coordination and control of the numerous organizations formed for the purpose of taking part in the campaign. It is believed that the Hughes Alliance will be of great value in bringing all these diverse elements and organizations into active service at the same time preventing waste of time and money, or working at cross purposes with each other, and affording them an opportunity to perform service of value in complete harmony and cooperation with the regular party organizations. This idea was the dominant note of the speakers at the New York meeting. The address of the new president, Philip J. McCook, set forth this view clearly when he said in part:

Election of Hughes Only Aim.

"We have no aim except to aid in the election of Charles E. Hughes as President.

"We have no purpose except to help, in such ways as seems best to you and to us, in electing Mr. Hughes.

"We have no plan except to work with you and others for the election of Mr. Hughes.

"That is our sole test of membership—is a man willing to work for the election of Charles E. Hughes? That will be our sole test of what we do in this campaign—will it help the common cause of electing Charles E. Hughes? We want to do what will help to that end and shall endeavor to refrain from doing what will, in the long run, and according to the common judgment, not help to that end.

"Needless to say, the Hughes Alliance does not covet for itself any role of independent existence, as a political party or as the faction of a political party. We do not offer a substitute for that kind of conscientious and constructive political service which can be most effective when rendered through regular party channels.

"In personnel of officers and in all its campaign activities, the Alliance and each branch and auxiliary of it will be non-partisan and non-factional. It will take no part in any primary or factional contest. It will make no nominations, and will ratify none except that of Mr. Hughes. It will have no emblem and no place on primary or election ballot. It will endorse neither the platforms nor the principles of any particular party.

"We oppose an administration which has never faced an issue. We favor instead a man who has never refused to face an issue.

"With this outlook upon the activities of the campaign, we shall work in complete harmony and co-operation with the leaders and committees of your party organization. We have confidence in you and them. We have no thought of taking the place of any party committee or official in any community, or of entrusting the work of our Alliance there to a person distasteful to you. It is our ambition to work shoulder to shoulder with you, supplementing your efforts, undertaking only those things which you are not in a position to do, or which you do not think you can do as well as this independent body."

Chairman Willcox's Letter.

Wm. R. Willcox, National Republican Chairman, sent a letter in which he welcomed the help of the Alliance. The letter follows:

I welcome the Hughes Alliance to the support of the Republican presidential candidate.

It is my feeling and understanding that the work of the Alliance will be in aid and supplementary to that of the Republican organization.

Many men and women who rarely, if ever, have voted a Republican National ticket will this year vote for Governor Hughes. Democrats and Progressives, as well as Independents, without regard to their present political affiliations want to work and vote for Mr. Hughes. I would feel myself a poor sort of National Chairman if I did not cordially recognize this fact, and give all encouragement to any [illegible] movement looking to getting in motion this independent support of the candidate nominated by the Republican party in this hour of National need.

Address of F. C. Tanner.

Frederick C. Tanner, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, also told the Alliance leaders that there was a distinct service which the organization could perform in the campaign, part of his address follows:

"As Chairman of the Republican State Committee, I extend to you, men of all creeds and parties, the warmest co-operation in the election of Governor Hughes.

"I understand that your Constitution provides that the Alliance shall take part in no primary or factional contest, shall adopt no emblem and seek no place on the ballot, but shall give its undiluted strength in a single effort to elect Charles E. Hughes to the Presidency. Your Organization is not in antagonism to the Republican organization, but is supplemental to it. Your purpose so far as it goes, is the same as our purpose. We are all together in the one fight to elect Governor Hughes. Your Constitution and by-laws provide that the Alliance 'seek to work in entire harmony and co-operation with Party committees in behalf of Charles E. Hughes.' Under those circumstances Chairman Willcox and myself could not but welcome

An Independent's View.

The following statement of Mr. George Haven Putnam, one of the vice-presidents of the Alliance, is of particular interest to independents.

"Judge Hughes has carried out with exceptional efficiency and assured integrity of purpose and of action and distinctive success all of the responsibilities that have been placed upon him. He has had experience in executive work, and he has given evidence of possessing not only a trained mind, but a judicial temperament.

"In every election the voter has the opportunity not of securing altogether what he wants, but of securing more nearly what he wants from the one candidate than from the other. In my own case I fell into the habit of voting for McKinley whenever the Democrats nominated Bryan because the evils of the protective system seemed to me to be much smaller than those of a policy of the payment of debts, individual and national, at the rate of 50 cents on the dollar or less.

"Administration of High Calibre."

"As some offset to its support of the protective system the Republican party has the credit of having placed in its cabinets strong and capable men with whom its presidents have worked in co-operation and who have together secured for the administration a dignified and forcible policy. The voters have the right to feel assured that in the case of the election of Judge Hughes he will carry on the business of his administration in co-operation with associates in his cabinet of the calibre of [illegible]bility of Root, Stimson and Roosevelt.

"In this matter of the fulfillment of our national obligations we know that President Wilson and his cabinet have been weak, vacillating and unsuccessful. We have a right to hope for better things from Judge Hughes and from the class of advisers whom Judge Hughes will select.

It is my decision, therefore, as an independent who holds that the essential issue in this election is the defense of the republic and the fulfillment of our national obligations, to give my support to the candidate of the Republican party."

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The Up-to-Date Co.'s Store

WILL BE CLOSED WEDNESDAY, AUG. 2

to adjust and mark down its entire $82,500 stock of summer merchandise for the Final Sale which begins THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 3d, at 9:30 o'clock.

Despite the high market prices on all merchandise we are compelled to close out our enormous stock during the month of August. We give three reasons:

First---Our iron-clad rule is not to carry over one dollar's worth from one season to another, irrespective of the cost. You all know this.

Second---The next important reason is the frequent change of styles, which makes it imperative for us to dispose of spring and summer stock, irrespective of the great losses we sustain.

Third---We want our patrons who have been regular customers to realize that during this Final Sale they get something worth while as an appreciation of the patronage in the past.

Past records during our final sales corroborate every statement we make above.

The Sale Starts Thursday, August 3d, at 9:30. Watch for our big advertisement and also our windows.

LEE FOHL.

FOHL ADVOCATES SCIENTIFIC BASEBALL.

New York, July 26.—Statistics covering the first half of the 1916 season effectively shoot to pieces John McGraw's idea that "scientific baseball is bunk."

McGraw has come out in the open and spoofed the sacrifice hit and the hit-and-run game, yet the figures show that the teams that have used the sacrifice hit oftenest have been those that have been close to the top rung of the ladder all season.

The Cleveland Indians are an excellent example to prove the value of the sacrifice-hit game. With a team regarded by most baseball persons as little more than mediocre, they have kept near the top in the American League heap for more than three months. And the sacrifice hitting has been largely responsible.

Lee Fohl, manager of the club, is one of the greatest exponents of the sacrifice and the hit-and-run game. The Indians, as a result, have made more sacrifice hits than any club in either big circuit. And those same Indians, with a club admittedly weaker than the majority, have been in the fight all the way.

Ukrainians.

The Ukraine, once the first republic in eastern Europe, has been divided between her neighbors. Russia holds its largest part, with some 28,000,000 Ukrainians; the Russian nationalities call that country Maloroosia or Little Russia, and the people Little Russians. Austria-Hungary holds a much smaller number, 3,000,000 in eastern Galicia, 400,000 in Bukowina and 500,000 in sub-Carpathian districts of Hungary.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 26, 1916.

The Legislature next winter will find itself called on more strongly than ever before to make some provision whereby residents who are temporarily out of the State shall not lose their votes. Particularly will provision be asked for members of the National Guard, provided that an extra session is not called meanwhile. The State Constitution makes ample provision, as does also the election law, for residents of the State who are in the military service of the United States, either in the Army or Navy, "in time of war." Therefore, unless war shall exist between the United States and Mexico when election comes, the New York National Guardsmen who may be in service along the Mexican border or elsewhere outside the State will lose their votes. The soldier's vote in the field "in time of war" is cast differently than that of the civilian at home. Special war ballots are prepared by the Secretary of State and forwarded to the various commands. The election must be held at the headquarters of the captain or other commanding officer and the voters themselves may select their election officials. Each voter must sign an affidavit that he is entitled to vote and stating the county and election district. The election must be held within twenty days before the regular election day, and the envelopes containing the votes are distributed to the proper officials by the Secretary of State after they have been returned from the field. On account of the provision of the Constitution that such voting shall take place "in time of war," it would seem extremely doubtful if the legislature could do anything if a special session should be called. The subject of resident voters who are out of the State on election day having their votes counted has received much attention in the past few years but present conditions augment public interest. The number of New York Guard [illegible] now in the field outside of the State approximates fifteen thousand.

Sentiment rather than sense usually prompts the efforts of supporters of humane legislation, but such, happily, is not the case with the plea of Frederick L. Dutcher, head of a State anti-cruelty organization, who urges a license for cats the same as that now issued for dogs in our cities and villages by the authority of State law. There is no good reason to be urged against such a step, and it should be welcomed by friends of the feline tribe as well as by its enemies. The cat has no qualities superior to those possessed by the dog and both score evenly in all probability as germ carriers and as nuisances when allowed to roam unattached. Many a night has been made hideous for a slumberer by an untagged feline perched upon the fence in the immediate vicinity and the thought of a statute duly licensing such a performer, or else leaving it liable to destruction by the strong arm of the police would be immensely conducive to the comfort of human beings. By all means let us have a tax on the cats. The revenue thus realized would swell the kitty of this or that pension fund as the dog tax now does for the police pension fund in third class cities.

The number of accidental drownings this season keeps up to about the usual returns. The fool who rocks the boat is missing from many of the summer resorts this year and the deaths credited to him are smaller than usual, but the reckless swimmer has taken his place. Most of this year's victims have been unable to swim or else were beginners who were unaccustomed to going beyond their depth or for long distances. Those who have been seized with fear on finding themselves beyond their depth and in a struggle to recover their footing have lost their lives have been equalled in number by those who have been urged to swim for greater distances than those to which they were accustomed. Overexertion has superinduced cramps or other trouble in the latter case and the deaths of such persons can be directly attributed to the fool who is always anxious to have someone show off for his benefit. The excessively hot weather of the past ten days has made swimming eagerly desired by those who know how to swim but the sport has claimed its usual toll through carelessness or thoughtlessness. The amateur will undertake risks which the expert invariably avoids, but generally the amateur is far more willing to urge his friends to assume risks and responsibilities than to adopt them himself. The regrettable part of casualties resulting from such urging is that the fool responsible generally falls to appreciate the enormity of his offense and by another season is quite ready to risk human life again—provided it be the life of someone else.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Bogey—Do you think that golf interferes with business? Green—No, but business raises hob with a man's golf.—Judge.

"I wonder, now the militia troops are getting seasoned, if they are mustered out—" "Well?" "If they will get peppery?"—Baltimore American.

Newcomer (at resort)—Is this a restful place? Native—Well, it used ter be until folks began comin' here fer to rest.—Boston Transcript.

"Is your wife fond of athletics?" "Not at all. She justs wears that sport suit because she thinks she looks cute in it."—Detroit Free Press.

"Some of the things you have said deserve to be remembered forever," said the admiring friend. "I don't desire any such recognition," replied Senator Sorghum. "The success of a man in my position sometimes depends on the ease with which his previous observations can be forgotten."—Washington Star.

One on the Doctor.

One afternoon, just as Dr. Bundy's office hour had begun, a very excited man rushed into his office.

"Doctor, doctor, just one moment!" he cried.

"I'll see you shortly," said the doctor.

"Only a second, doctor!" protested the perturbed one. "Only a second is what I want!"

"I'll see you shortly," repeated the physician with impatience.

The man, with a sigh, took a seat in the reception room. His excitement soon subsided, apparently, and he read the magazines lying on the table, making no further efforts to see the doctor.

After several patients had consulted the doctor, the latter stepped over to the man, and said:

"You were in somewhat of a hurry, I believe, sir. What can I do for you?"

"Oh, nothing now," replied the man. "I only dropped in to tell you that your neighbor's cows have escaped from the yard, and are having a fine time among your flowerbeds."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Only One Such.

A Long Island teacher was recounting the story of Red Riding Hood. After describing the woods and wild animals that flourished therein, she added: "Suddenly Red Riding Hood heard a great noise. She turned about and what do you suppose she saw standing there, gazing at her and showing all its sharp, white teeth?" "Teddy Roosevelt!" volunteered one of the boys.—New York Times.

Election Agent—That was a good, long speech our candidate made on the agricultural question, wasn't it?

Farmer Ploughman—Oh, aye, it wasn't bad; but a couple o' night's good rain 'ud 'a' done a sight more good.—Answers.

In His Line.

Harry Lauder, the Scottish comedian, said at a dinner in New York:

"I know a German-American dentist, not yet naturalized, who was urged by his consul to go back home on a false passport and take up the cause of the fatherland.

"'But what good could I do?' he said. 'I'm only a dentist.'

"'A dentist? Then you're the very man for us,' said the consul. 'Think how useful you'd be in gas attacks.'"—Washington Star.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

July 26, 1896.—A man named Lake rescued from drowning at South Rondout by crew of the yacht Anderson.

John Moore, well known horseman, died at Saugerties.

Brick sold in New York for $4.25 to $5 per thousand.

Six year old daughter of Mrs. John Scott of Walker Valley found after being lost in Shawangunk Mountains for three days.

July 26, 1906.—Union men on Kline's brickyard at Port Ewen struck when their request for a "closed shop" was denied.

Fred Hammond, baggage man, jumped out of baggage car in front of a train at Phoenicia. He escaped with slight injuries.

Arthur E. Fronefield of Port Ewen appointed district secretary of Christian Endeavor in Ulster county.

Back to Woodstock.

Rocco Gnadilo, who is employed by a contractor at Woodstock, walked to Kingston on Tuesday, and made an unsuccessful effort to drink all of the liquor in Kingston, with the result that Chief Wood picked him up on central Broadway that afternoon. At the time Rocco was unable to care for himself. This morning he was penitent and pleaded hard for another chance. He said he had never spent a night in jail before and never wanted to again. Recorder Lang sentenced him to ten days in jail, but suspended sentence provided he got out of town in one hour. Rocco got.

PORT EWEN.

Port Ewen, July 26.—Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Elvery, A. E. Neal and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Neal and son motored from Phoenicia Sunday and spent the afternoon with Mrs. Martha Neal on Salem street.

William Stephenson and daughters, the Misses Ethel, Wave and Jennie, motored to Oneonta Friday, returning home in the evening. Harold French and Miss Mary French, who are attending summer school at Oneonta, accompanied them home and spent the week end here.

Vinal LeFever, who has spent a few days at his home on Broadway, returned to New York city Tuesday.

LOCAL FIRM COMPLIMENTED.

Sharon Springs Folks Praise Work of DeGraff & Hogeboom.

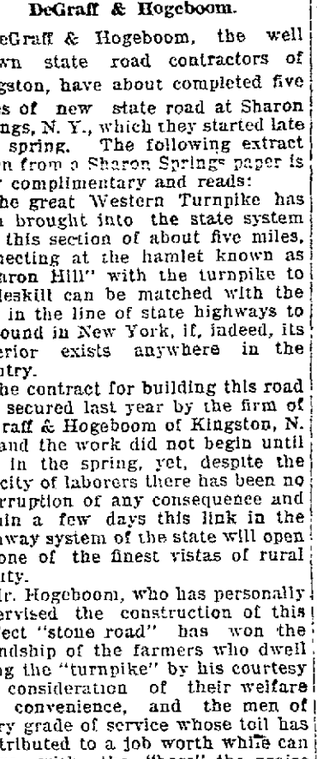
DeGraff & Hogeboom, the well known state road contractors of Kingston, have about completed five miles of new state road at Sharon Springs, N. Y., which they started late this spring. The following extract taken from a Sharon Springs paper is very complimentary and reads:

The great Western Turnpike has been brought into the state system and this section of about five miles, connecting at the hamlet known as "Sharon Hill" with the turnpike to Cobleskill can be matched with the best in the line of state highways to be found in New York, if, indeed, its superior exists anywhere in the country.

The contract for building this road was secured last year by the firm of DeGraff & Hogeboom of Kingston, N. Y., and the work did not begin until late in the spring, yet, despite the scarcity of laborers there has been no interruption of any consequence and within a few days this link in the highway system of the state will open up one of the finest vistas of rural beauty.

Mr. Hogeboom, who has personally supervised the construction of this perfect "stone road" has won the friendship of the farmers who dwell along the "turnpike" by his courtesy and consideration of their welfare and convenience, and the men of every grade of service whose toil has contributed to a job worth while can share with the "boss" the praise which honest service always wins.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.



1661.—A Practical and Pleasing Model—Girls' Over Blouse Dress With Guimpe, Having Two Styles of Sleeve.

Striped seersucker in gray and white, with piping of red, were used for the dress, and white batiste for the guimpe. The collar is embroidered with red floss. This model is also good for linen, galatea, percale, chambray, nun's velling, taffeta and tub silk, voile, crepe and batiste. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material for the dress and two yards of 27 inch material for the guimpe, for an 8 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

REAPPORTIONMENT ACT IS SET ASIDE

Court of Appeals Holds That the Law is Unconstitutional—Fall Election Will be on the Old Apportionment.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, July 26.—The reapportionment act of the 1916 legislature was invalidated by the court of appeals Tuesday in an opinion declaring the legislation "unconstitutional and void."

Governor Whitman is understood to be opposed to calling an extra session of the legislature to enact a reapportionment act that will stand the test of the courts and the fall elections probably will be conducted according to the old apportionment.

The court held the 1916 reapportionment act is unconstitutional so far as it applies to the county of New York, but overrules the decision of the appellate division that the establishment of fifty-one instead of fifty senatorial districts is unconstitutional.

Judge Chase, who wrote the decision, which was concurred in by all the other jurists who decided the case, said:

"The intention of the people to limit by constitution the number of senators to fifty is expressed in language that cannot be misunderstood as follows:

" 'The senate shall always be composed of fifty members.' That limitation is, however, subject to the exception stated theren. It is provided that if any county having three or more senators at the time of any apportionment is entitled in the ratio prescribed 'to an additional senator or senators, such additional senator or senators shall be given to such county in addition to the fifty senators, and the whole number of senators shall be increased to that extent.' * * * We do not think that the constitution was violated in dividing the state into fifty-one senatorial districts."

The court continues:

"By a constitutional provision a town and block are each made a unit of a population for the purpose of determining equality in the number of inhabitants in senate districts The language of the constitution so far as it relates to towns and blocks we repeat as follows:

" 'No town and no block in a city enclosed by streets or public ways shall be divided in the formation of senate districts; nor shall any district contain a greater excess in population over an adjoining district in the same county than the population of a town or block therein adjoining such a district. Counties, towns or blocks which form their location may be included in either of two districts shall be so placed as to make said districts most nearly equal in number of inhabitants excluding aliens.'

"The county of New York is by the act in question, divided into nine senate districts, numbered from 13 to 20 inclusive. The differences in population between the 12th and the 13th district is 1,377, between the 14th and the 16th 1,059; between the 15th and the 13th, 516, between the 14th and the 12th, 236, and between the 17th and the 15th, 1,016.

"The block bounded by Greene, Forsyth, Broome and Christie streets, on the line between the 12th and the 13th Senatorial districts contains 636 inhabitants, and there are blocks between each of the other named Senatorial districts, on the line between said districts, containing a less number of inhabitants than one-half of the difference between the population of the senate districts as stated.

"It is said that these differences arise from inadvertance and mistake, and that they are so slight that they should be disregarded by the court. We are of the opinion that the constitutional provision quoted is mandatory, and that assuming, without deciding, that the difference in the number of inhabitants between districts might be so very trvial and technical that it should be overlooked and the apportionment upheld, the constitutional provision is so plainly violated that it cannot be sustained."

The decision continues:

"While some of these districts may be subject to criticism with reference to compactness, we are unable to say from a mere inspection of the maps that the constitutional provision in regard to compactness has been violated in this case. We approve of the rule adopted by the legislature and which has been recognized and adhered to by it since the constitution of 1894 in alloting the number of assemblymen to the several counties of the state.

"We do not intend by this decision to hold that it is not possible for the courts at any time to set aside an act of apportionment in part and to sustain it in part. Complications that may arise by setting aside the apportionment now under consideration in the county of New York or in the counties of New York and the Bronx and sustaining it in the other counties of the state are such that counsel have agreed that the court that the act must either be sustained or set aside as a whole.

"Unless the legislature is convened and passes a new apportionment act the conduct of the approahing election will have to be controlled by pre-existing laws so far as they are applicable."

Proper Way to Look on Life.

Take life like a man. Take it as though it was—as it is—an earnest, vital, essential affair. Take it just as though you were born to the task of performing a merry part in it, as though the world had waited your coming. Take it as though it were a grand opportunity to achieve, to carry forward great and good schemes, to hold and to cheer a suffering, weary, it may be a heart-broken brother.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.—STATE of New York. Office of the state commission of highways, Albany, N. Y. Pursuant to the provisions of chapter 30, laws of 1909, as amended by chapter 686, laws of 1911 and chapter 80, laws of 1913, sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at their office, No. 55 Lancaster St., Albany, N. Y., at one o'clock p. m. on Monday, the 14th day of August, 1916, for the improvement of the following highways:

ULSTER COUNTY.

Road No.	Name of Road.	App Lgth.
1417	Walkill Newburgh, Part 1	3.12

Also on Wednesday, August 16th, 1916.

1418	Milton Landing Milton	0.55

Also on Friday, August 18th, 1916

1419	Rosendale village	3.17

Maps, plans, specifications and estimates may be seen and proposal forms obtained at the office of the commission in Albany, N. Y., and also at the office of Division Engineer B. H. Walt, Columbus Institute, 11 Washington St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

The especial attention of bidders is called to "General Information For Bidders" in the itemized proposal, specifications and contract agreement.

Proposals for each road or contract must be presented in a separate sealed envelope, endorsed on the outside with the name and number of the road or contract for which the proposal is made. Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check payable to the order of the state commission of highways for an amount equal to at least five per cent of the amount of the proposal which such cash or check accompanies.

This cash or check will be held by the commission until the contract and bond are duly executed.

The successful bidder will be required to give a performance bond for fifty per cent of the contract, and a maintenance bond covering the wearing surface of all roads except waterbound macadam and cement concrete pavements for twenty per cent of the contract price of the items which comprise the wearing surface, such bonds to be executed by a surety company to be approved by the commission, or a bond secured by the deposit of collateral securities to be approved by the commission.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

FOHL'S CRACK BATTERY

Two Former Breaker Boys Make Success at Cleveland.

Pitcher Stanley Coveleskie and Catcher O'Neill Become Stars in Big Show Only Through Dogged Determination.

Two former breaker boys of the coal regions of Pennsylvania are doing their share toward keeping Cleveland a big factor in the American league race. They form a battery that has been uniformly successful all season.

The ex-anthracite wonders who are increasing in fame with leaps and bounds are Pitcher Stanley Coveleskie of Shamokin and Catcher Steve O'Neill of Minooka. Oddly enough both players were tried by Connie Mack in their undeveloped stage, but were let out. After numerous rebuffs Stanley Coveleskie, whose brother, Harry, won fame earlier in the major league, unheralded came to Cleveland this year and made good from the start.

Coveleskie is an iron man, and has been worked repeatedly out of turn, especially being dependable as a relief man in close games. In a recent series with the Mackmen Stanley performed an uncommon feat. Cleveland was leading, 3 to 1, when Klepfer weakened in the ninth inning.

The first two Mackmen to face him in the mound reached base. Lee

Catcher Steve O'Neill.

Fohl quickly demoted Klepfer to the bath and called on Stanley to save the game. The new star grittily fanned Oldring and Pinch Hitters Schang and Stellbauer in order, saving the game

Fourteen seasons ago the fans were following with much interest the career of the O'Neill twins of the St. Louis Nationals. Mike was a pitcher and John a catcher. They enjoyed big popularity for a while, but the partnership was afterward split by the players being sent to different teams.

Mike finally drifted to the minors. He is quite a power today in the minors, being manager of the Utica, New York State league team. John's career was stopped by death.

Steve, a younger brother of the famous twins, has this season earned a bigger position in the fast set than even his brothers ever enjoyed. Steve is young, but not a newcomer in the fast set. After his Athletic experience he joined the Cleveland team in 1912 and made good from the start. He batted the ball hard in 1913 and 1914 as well as catching excellently, but it was not until this season that he achieved his biggest success.

WHITFIELD.

Whitfield, July 26.—Miss Hilda Quick of Brooklyn arrived here on Thursday and will spend the remainder of the summer at Mrs. D. Van Wagonen's.

Mrs. Roscoe Lockwood of Kyserike spent Sunday with her parents in this place.

Ellsworth Dixon of Kingston is spending a few weeks at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Luther Quick.

George Stokes and Arthur Davis have purchaed Ford cars.

Harry Miller has left the employ of James H. Enderly.

Mrs. Theoderic Quick is still in ill health.

Mrs. Severyn Middagh of Fort Myer, Va., is a summer guest at Mrs. DeWitt Barley's.

H. A. Quick, Mrs. Jesse Quick, Mrs. Roscoe Lockwood and the Misses Lillian Enderly and Bessie Van Vliet were callers at the Ryder Homestead on Sunday. Mrs. Quick and party were on their way to Accord to attend church, but heard that the Reformed Church at that place was closed.

DeWitt Parley was brought home from business, ill, one day last week.

Mrs. Cleary and the Misses Clare and Margaret Dempsey of New York city have taken up residence in their summer apartments here.

Chester Quick of Accord has been substituting on the R. F. D. mail route for a few days.

Osterhoudt Bros. of Kripplebush are gathering the harvest of DeWitt Van Wagonen.

The Misses Leona Quick and Josephine Barley attended the girls' club meeting at the home of Miss Edna Baker at Accord on Saturday.

DeWitt Barley lost the valuable horse a few days ago, which he recently purchased of William Quick.

Mrs. Jerome Middagh expects to leave in the near future to spend some time at Rosendale with her daughter, Mrs. Brett, of New York city, who has a summer cottage there.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dixon and family of Kingston spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Luther Quick.

J. Harley Tanner of New Hamburg motored to this place on Sunday. Mr. Tanner and family have been spending a few weeks at Camp Whitman and will leave this week via auto for a camping expedition through the south.

Our Sunday school is closed on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Van Wagonen and the Misses Hilda Quick and Lillian Enderly were callers at the home of Mrs. Jerome Dann Sunday afternoon.

Proper Hats Important.

Wearing hats in boyhood retards the growth and full development of the vessels that nourish the roots of the hair and accounts for the baldness in early life. An examination of the heads of boys will enable one to determine whose heads will be made bald by the wearing of hats and whose heads will not, with a reasonable degree of certainty. Hats should be made to measure like suits and be so constructed that the pressure will rest only upon the corners of the forehead and the center of the back of the head.

Caddie's Criticism.

A beginner on a brand-new golf course in the southwest of London was having a particularly trying experience on a hole laid across a well-meaning but exasperating plowed field. When he did not miss the ball he hit the ground behind it. His caddie, summing up the position with his cold, professional eye, remarked to his companion: "My word! It wouldn't cost him much if he was playin' with new-laid eggs!"

Fireproof Houses.

As a preventive against fire Austrian laws require dwellings and business houses to be built throughout of solid materials.

SAWKILL MAN PARALYSIS VICTIM

First Adult to Die of the Disease is Policeman Michael F. Leahy of New York, a Former Resident of Sawkill, an Uncle of Two Children Now Ill in Saugerties.

The first adult to die from the present epidemic of infantile paralysis is Policeman Michael F. Leahy, 29 years old, of the Oak street station, New York city, a former resident of Sawkill, and known to many in Kingston. Policeman Leahy resides at No. 1,114 Bedford avenue, in Brooklyn. He reported sick Tuesday morning from his home. He became paralyzed a few hours later and was taken to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital in Brooklyn, where he died that evening.

Policeman Leahy was the first adult in whose case the dread disease resulted fatally, although others have been reported to be suffering with it. He was stationed in the James street district, on the lower east side in New York city, but had not personally handled any cases.

Dr. James Krom, health officer of Saugerties, reports two cases of infantile paralysis, the children of Thomas Cusick at Mrs. B. Hellion's on the state road near Centerville, both in a precarious condition. They are from Brooklyn. The father is employed by Braun & Wagner, as curb setter, and the family came from Brooklyn recently. Policeman Leahy, who died in Brooklyn on Tuesday of the disease was an uncle of the children.

Guests at The Kenwood.

The following guests are spending some time at The Kenwood, No. 154 Fair street. Mr. and Mrs. Trieto and daughter, Gloria, of Canageig, Cuba, who are visiting Mr. Trieto's son, A. Trieto Mr. Trieto, senior, is an importer of cattle into the states and also to foreign countries. Eduardo Alvarez and sister, Miss Theresa Alvarez are from Havana, Cuba, where their father, Gregorio Alvarez is a commission merchant connected with the importing house of Dusack of France. Mr. and Mrs. Dowe and children of Yonkers are also at The Kenwood Mr. Dowe is private secretary to the public service commission of New Jersey.

SAUGERTIES.

Saugerties, July 26.—The funeral of J. V. L. Overbagh, who died in Newark, N. J., was held from the residence of his brother, R. R. Overbagh, on Main street Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. Thomas Cole officiated. The interment was in Mountain View.

Mrs. Ellsworth Welven's funeral was held this afternoon from the home of Harry Garrison on Livingston street. The services were in charge of the Rev. Grant E. Robinson of the M. E. Church, Malden.

A few minutes before 8 o'cock this morning the employes of the Crown Cloak Company, occupying the third floor of the building of Lasher & Burhans, rushed down the stairs to the street saying the place was on fire. It was quickly extinguished without an alarm being sounded.

Dr. Stanley C. Reynolds will close his dental office this week and remove with his family to Syracuse.

The police court case of Wright against Dugan, which was on the calendar yesterday, was adjourned until this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Lumber for the repairing of the dam having arrived, the water in the upper Esopus has been let out and repairs are under way.

Mrs. B. F. Davis, who has been quite ill at her father's home on West Bridge street is improving.

Edward Sickler in the employ of P. C. Smith, while digging a trench for water pipe extension on the Schroder Place Tuesday, had a narrow escape, the sand caving in on him. Help being nearby he was quickly extricated from his dangerous predicament.

Leo Snyder of West Bridge street, who recently was operated on for ear trouble, is visiting at Mt. Marion.

London's Squares.

The square as a residential quarter is essentially British, being analogous neither to the French place nor the Italian piazzo nor to the German platz. Nowhere on the continent do we find any assemblage of private houses the inhabitants of which have a prescriptive right to the ground on which their residences abut. The London squares, according to their historian, E. B. Chancellor, "number about 200, and their characteristics are curiously diverse. Hardly any of them are in form square at all. There are some which are triangles, some with only three and many with unequal sides and a few mere wedges and excrescences from adjoining streets."—London Tit-Bits.

Horse High Jump Record.

According to the latest published official figures on the subject, the record high jump for horses is held by Heatherbloom, an American horse, with a jump of eight feet two inches. Confidence, a Canadian bay gelding, is credited by the same records with a jump of eight feet one-half inch at Ottawa in 1913.

People, to whom this sale will be a first visit, will be surprised to find out how well we live up to the letter of our agreement. No disappointments! Old patrons know it!

The fact that some of these shoes were made for last season's business is the reason that we can sell them for these prices. Since the time they were made the price of leather has increased so much that it is impossible to turn these qualities out of a factory at anywhere near so small a price.

So take advantage of this last chance to procure our high grade footwear at so small prices.

MRS. ATWATER'S AUTOMOBILE SUIT

Attorney Houghtaling Gives Reasons Why he Declines to Pay Note for $200—He Got Atwater Out of Jail.

A civil action brought by Mrs. Lillian T. Atwater, wife of William T. Atwater, who was at one time a noted aviator, against Attorney Earle H. Houghtaling and his wife, Bessie M. Houghtaling, to recover the sum of $200 on a promissory note made and delivered to her by the defendants on October 28, 1915, was tried on Monday before Justice of the Peace Henry L. Wiley at Walden. The note in question was given on the Wallkill National Bank and was due April 28 of this year, at which time Mrs. Atwater said the note was presented for payment, but was not paid and later protested. Attorney J. D. Wilson, Jr., of Newburgh appeared for Mrs. Atwater, and Attorney Hirschberg of Newburgh represented Mr. and Mrs. Houghtaling.

The Houghtalings in their answer admit the allegations in the complaint except the allegation in relation to the alleged proper name of the plaintiff. The Houghtalings state the note was given to Mrs. Atwater as part payment of the purchase price of $700 for an automobile owned by plaintiff, of which amount $500 was paid at the time of purchase and the note in question, properly signed and delivered under representations at that time, that the car was specially built for Mr. Atwater by the Oakland automobile concern, for advertising purposes, and that the price of the car was $3,000, of which amount $1,400 was deducted by the automobile concern in return for the advertising they would receive by Atwater using the machine.

At the time the plaintiff represented the car as being new in 1914 and being in perfect running condition and that it was not a rebuilt car. The Houghtalings claim these statements were untrue and were made by plaintiff with the intention to defraud.

The Houghtalings further claimed that an action is pending in the supreme court with Attorney Houghtaling as plaintiff and Mrs. Atwater as defendant, founded upon a contract alleged to have been made by Mrs. Atwater.

In Monday's suit the Houghtalings further claimed that an agreement on the part of Mrs. Atwater to include a policy of insurance valued at $15, also accessories of the car, valued at $40, was not carried out. That in October, 1915, Mrs Atwater retained Attorney Houghtaling to write and mail to every consular and diplomatic representative in the employ of the United States in South America a letter requesting information in relation to a prospective trip that she and her husband anticipated makin in the south and in those countries in a flying boat. Mr. Houghtaling stated he had written and that his charge of $50 for his services were never paid.

Further claim was made that Attorney Houghtaling retained Attorney Hirschberg to recover 40 shares of Pullman bonds for Mrs Atwater, and that they were recovered but that Mrs. Atwater had never paid the $150 agreed by her as payment for their recovery.

Attorney Houghtaling therefor asked that an affirmative judgment be granted him against Mrs. Atwater for $225.

Justice Wiley reserved decision and both sides were requested to submit briefs.

Monday Atwater admitted that after his attorneys, Marsh & Weaver, had made six attempts to secure his release from jail, Attorney Houghtaling had succeeded on a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that the referee had no jurisdiction to make such an order. Atwater was released from jail in October, 1915, and soon after Attorney Houghtaling appeared in town with Atwater's roadster.

Atwater had been committed to jail in New York city for refusal to turn over $5,000 to the trustee in bankruptcy, Jacob Decker, of Newburgh, at the orders of Referee Anthony of that city.

WIRE TAPPING WITNESS SUICIDE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 26—Detective John J. Kennel, oldest member of the police wire tapping squad, shot himself today while being sought as a witness in the "John Doe" inquiry into the wire tapping scandal which is being conducted before Justice Greenbaum. The bullet entered near the heart and the attending doctors said the wound would probably prove fatal.

Kennel was one of the men who "listened in" on the telephone wire of Monsignor J. J. Dunn, the Rev. Father William B. Farrell, Dr. D. C. Potter and Robert W. Hebberd during the Strong committee's charities investigation. He was therefore one of the principal witnesses at the hearing of the libel, conspiracy and perjury charges that followed.

In a test a few days ago, ordered by special arrangement with the court, Kennel failed to record properly the conversation between two lawyers and it is supposed that this weighed upon his mind.

Likes to Travel Against Stream.

The tendency to go against the stream is very strongly marked in a catfish, called arges, which forces its way up the torrential streams of the Andes, gripping with its mouth and using a toothed ventral pate as a lever. It can climb up many feet of smooth, water-worn rock.

upon police work which will be of interest to its members.

"I expect there will be a number of interesting and instructive papers read by different members, and I hope and trust that they will be discussed both pro and con by all the members present.

The Bertillon Finger Print and Flashlight Photograph System.

"I believe this system should be in operation in every police department in this state. It is now in use in almost every large city in the United States and a number of the smaller cities have fallen in line.

"The ex-convict will hesitate to operate within a city that he knows maintains an identification bureau; he will hesitate and think of that prior conviction that he has hanging over his head; he will be afraid of being 'picked up' on the streets by an officer who has had access to the photographs and original records of this system, before he has had time to commit the act for which he came to the city to perform.

"I am informed that a system which would take care of a city of fifty thousand inhabitants could be installed for five hundred dollars, and I am also informed that there is one of this type installed in the city of Kingston at the present time.

"I trust every chief will investigate this system before leaving the city, for I am sure he will be well paid for his trouble.

"I know of no better way to get acquainted with each other, than when a subject is being discussed for all members to join in a hearty discussion pertaining to same. If any member has any ideas of his own which he thinks would be of benefit to the association at large, it is his duty to give his version of the suject under discussion. I assume every member present, is here for the purpose of exchanging ideas, so that when we arrive at our respective homes, we will be better prepared to take up the work entrusted to our care by the citizens of the different communities which we represent.

"During the past year, there were two meetings of the board of governors held at Albany, for the purpose of making arrangements for the publishing of an official manual for this association. A contract was made and signed with Charles G. Riehl, of New York City, to publish the same. From that contract, we have now in our treasury the some of $750 to be used as we see fit. I believe this is a subject to be taken up at this meeting, by the chiefs present, to ascertain the advisability of publishing this manual another year. This should either be settled at this meeting or again left to the discretion of the board of governors.

"I have taken upon myself the pleasure of extending an invitation to Frederick H. Elliott, general secretary of Safety First Federation of America, of which Honorable John Gillespie, police commissioner of the city of Detroit is chairman, to address us on the subject of "Uniform Traffic Regulation." I believe he can give us some very valuable information upon this subject and I know the members will be pleased to extend to him the privileges of the floor upon that subject.

"During the last session of the legislature, there was a bill introduced and passed by both houses but I understand same was vetoed by the governor, for the purpose of forming a state constabulary. This is a subject that ought to be of interest to this association and I believe should be discussed by us at this time. A state constabulary, free from politics, would be of a great benefit to the different police departments of the state, especially so in small cities. I would like to have this subject discussed and have the association go on record as advocating a state constabulary to work in conjunction with the different police departments of the state.

"In closing, I wish to say to the members of the association that, when the time comes for us to adjourn, we will have become better acquainted with each other, so that we can work as a body of one, for the uplift of humanity, the detection of crime, and the protection of the different municipalities which we represent."

Secretary Hyatt's Report.

Chief of Police James L. Hyatt of Albany presented his annual report as secretary and treasurer, showing that of $1,939.49 receipts, the sum of $1,153.41 had been expended, leaving a tidy remainder of $786.08 on hand.

Among other speakers of the afternoon were: George S. Dougherty, former second deputy commissioner of police of New York, who lectured entertainingly on "Detectives," and advocated the reading of a recent book of information on the American police system.

Finger-prints and their Value in the Detection of Crime was the subject of a technical paper read by Raymond A. Hill, superintendent of identification in the office of the sheriff of Westchester county. He cited two instances where criminals had been aprehended through the finger prints he has compiled and in conclusion advocated a finger print bureau in every county of the state with a central bureau in Albany or New York. In the Westchester Bureau, located at White Plains, there are now more than 1,500 finger-prints on record, Mr. Hill declared.

The banquet of the association will be held at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Stuyvesant. Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo is the principal speaker.

About the only mishap that marked the arrival of the police chiefs was a breakdown which Chief G. O. Bush's automobile suffered at Newburgh on the way up from Tuxedo Park. With Chief Bush was Mrs. Bush and Chief J. C. McCoach of Middletown. They took the train at Newburgh for Kingston arriving here shortly before 11 o'clock.

Among early arrivals were Chiefs James N. Schofield, Cohoes; S. S. Conover of Buffalo, chief of the Pennsylvania Railroad police; Chief Austin Wilcox of Oneida; Chief Kane of Geneva; Chief Hyatt of Albany; Chief W. J. Weir of Saranac Lake.

The roster of New York Association of Chiefs of Police is as follows:

(By La Raconteuse).

The afternoon coat of natural colored tussah is quite a popular item this season. It is shown in various lengths, either to the hip, knee or shoe top. All are very smart, though it rests with the individual to select a becoming length. The illustration is a smart model that just escapes the knee. Slit pockets and well tailored velvet collar and cuffs are interesting details. Huge pearl buttons serve to fasten and trim the front.

GLINTS FROM THE SHIELDS

Real convention weather for the summer of 1916.

It has remained for Chief Quigley of Rochester to find the silver lining of the rain clouds.

"This will be a genuine vacation for the chiefs from up-state," he said, "because there has been so much wet weather there that the doors of all the houses are swollen tight and it is a hard job for the owner himself to get in to say nothing of a burglar." The weather lock is the only one that can be used in some homes according to the chief, for many houses are swell affairs all right with this moisture.

Chief of Police Hyatt of Albany is the busy bee of the opening day's doings, checking his fellow chiefs and getting their finger prints so as to have everything in readiness for the business session and the banquete tonight. Chief Hyatt has served as secretary and treasurer of the organization for a long period of time and is among the most popular and best known of its members.

Almost every gathering of police chiefs has been marked by some fake pocket-picking episode or other for the fun of the thing but it is said that on the International Association's gathering there were some valuables actually lost on one excursion a couple of years ago. For that reason this form of fun has been frowned upon and it is intended that no crime waves shall ripple the surface of the entertainment in Kingston.

Roll call today showed everybody present even to Chief Rain-maker, an unbidden guest who nevertheless threatens to make himself the most conspicuous. But as police duties call for action regardless of the elements, no mere rainfall is to be allowed to interfere with the enjoyment of the chieftains on their annual outing. Besides, it is rumored that President Singleton who hails from Watertown has come equipped with heavy rubber coat and high-topped rubber boots.

Police chiefs may talk shop but they seldom touch upon politics which is much to be thankful for. Besides their shop talk deals with criminology and some of the inside stuff of the departments and the difficulties attendant upon enforcing the conflicting mass of legislation from state and municipal lawmakers. On this lastnamed subject, the chiefs expect to hear some golden words of wisdom from Secretary of State Hugo tonight, the state official being duly licensed and tagged to deliver an address upon traffic laws and their relation to automobilists and the police.

"Ye do well to call him chief," quoted one of the visitors this morning as the tall form of Chief of Police J. Allan Wood loomed up in the mist. Chief Wood's work in arranging for the convention, with the single exception of handing something to the weather bureau, has been thorough in every way and the heads of the association manifested their appreciation in emphatic terms.

The Locust Club is swinging around the Colonial City and the nightstick is the big stick in Kingston just now.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

Arrangements have been completed for the mid-summer meeting of the New York State Automobile Association, which will be held at the Thousand Island House, Alexandria Bay, Monday, July 31, at 10 a. m. The state highway department officials have co-operated to the extent of putting the highways to Alexandria Bay from the different sections of the state in excellent condition so the visiting automobilists are assured of an enjoyable tour.

At this meeting matters of vital importance to motorists will be discussed and definite action taken. The legislative committee, of which Senator Charles J. Hewitt is chairman, and which is considering automobile legislation, will hold a meeting at the same time, to obtain the views of the automobilists from all sections of the state on this important subject. Uniform traffic regulations will also be discussed.

The Jefferson County Automobile Club has provided a splendid program with special provision for ladies who attend. The private yacht Nereid, owned by Colonel Staples, and other private yachts and motor boats will be at the disposal of the members and their friends. The program will also include a baseball game, band concerts, a banquet, and dancing.

Among the speakers will be Secretary of State Hugo, Highway Commissioner Duffey, Senators Hewitt and Norton, Mayor C. F. Burns, of Troy, president of the conference of mayors, officials of the Ontario Motor League and other prominent public men.

POLICE CHIEFS HEAR SAFETY FIRST APPEAL

Practical Suggestions by Frederick H. Elliott on Simplifying and Unifying Traffic Regulations—A Program of Legislation Outlined in Detail.

An appeal for the adoption of uniform traffic regulations in the cities, towns and villages throughout the state of New York was made in an address before the convention of the New York police chiefs today by Frederick H. Elliott of New York, executive secretary of the Safety First Federation of America.

"That there is at present a chaotic condition as regards traffic regulations caused primarily by the varying traffic ordinances in force in the municipalities and villages throughout the commonwealth is admitted by every one conversant with the situation," said Mr. Elliott. "Nearly every city has street traffic regulations that differ in some important principle from those of other cities and it is impossible for the travelling public to be familiar with the provisions of all.

"Every locality now frames its own traffic ordinances following no general policy thereby creating a variation in important requirements, in detail of enforcement, and in penalties imposed. In some instances the local ordinances conflict with the state laws, while others contain provisions which should be the subject of legislative enactment rather than of local regulation. Realizing this situation a year and a half ago, the street traffic committee of the Safety First Federation undertook to codify the traffic rules of the principal cities in the belief that a standard code of traffic regulations could be framed suitable to the needs of all communities or at least would be uniform as to cities of certain size. It was contended that such an accomplishment would be most satisfactory to vehicular operators and drivers who wish to obey the law, but many of whom, through excusable ignorance make infractions of the regulations and become confused, resulting in complications which are frequently followed by some form of an accident."

The announcement of this accomplishment after a study and investigation of the subject extending over eighteen months will be welcomed by everyone familiar with the present chaotic condition, caused primarily by the varying traffic ordinances in force in our municipalities.

In this work the street traffic committee composed of state and city officials and the representatives of automobile clubs, transportation and street railway companies, has had the hearty co-operation of the authorities having under their jurisdiction the regulation of street traffic in sixty-five important cities in the United States and Canada.

The result of the committee's efforts has been a source of gratification of this achievement under the leadership of the Safety Frst Federation.

Among the important features of the standard code as compiled by the street traffic committee, are the following:

Prohibiting the use of the muffler cut-out.

Prohibiting excessive omission of smoke or gases.

Prohibiting excessive emission of warning signals.

Providing that all vehicles shall carry lights from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrse.

Approval of the near-side stop regulation for street cars.

Providing car stop safety zones for persons getting on or off street cars.

Providing for protecting the car safety zones for encroachment by vehicles, either moving or standing.

Requiring that all vehicles must come to a full stop at least five feet behind a street car when stopping, or which has stopped, to receive or discharge passengers.

Requiring pedestrians to cross the street at the regular crossing, to cross with the traffic and comply with the signals of traffic officers.

Requiring the locking of unattended motor vehicles to prevent their removal by unauthorized persons.

Requiring properly illuminated license tags on automobiles, and favoring the adoption by automobile manufacturers of a uniform transparently illuminated license tag holder.

Requiring in the event of an accident that the driver must stop and render all possible assistance to persons injured, giving name and address to any persons concerned or any persons requesting same, and, in the absence of a police officer, the driver shall report the accident to police headquarters.

Recommending the licensing of all motor vehicle drivers or operators, subject to suspension or revocation by the issuing authority. It is contended that the adoption of this regulation will result in a material reduction of highway accidents. The chief requisite for securing the license shall be proper physical, mental and moral qualifications.

The details of granting the licenses necessarily rests with the several state legislatures and would include such matters as affixing to the license card a photograph of the licensee, for the purpose of affording a means of identification and adding to the practicability of enforcement.

Copies of the new standard code were distributed for the first time among the chiefs of police in attendance at the convention. Mr. Elliott stated that the code either in its entirety, or many important sections thereof had already been adopted in several of the larger cities, this being particularly true of the regulation controlling glaring headlights, which is now a law in Massachusetts and has been adopted by ordinance in the cities of New Orleans, St. Louis, Cleveland, Indianapolis and Wilmington. Reference was made to the committee's investigation upon this important subject and the co-operation which had been given by the Society of Automobile Engineers, comprising the chief engineers and designers of the automobile industry.

Mr. Elliott reviewed the progress which has been made since the inception of the safety first movement in New York city nearly three years ago and referred to the successful application of the new regulations and ordinances in the Metropolis, adopted at the instigation of the Safty First Society after a thorough study and investigation had been made by experts of the conditions attending numerous highway accidents at the request of the police department or the board of coroners. Among the important recommendations adopted by the police department which have been enacted by ordinance in the board of aldermen are the following:

Near side stop for street cars.
One-way-traffic streets.
Safety zones at car stops.
Use of semaphores in Fifth Avenue.
Safety lanes painted at street crossings.
Regulating speed of automobile mail trucks and restricting their use to certain streets.
Two days' instead of one day's imprisonment for exceeding speed limit.
Drivers of fire department apparatus compelled to obey traffic regulations when returning from fires.
Closing to vehicular traffic of a number of streets in congested districts during certain hours, to safeguard children in their play.
Granting of power to the police commissioner to restrict the speed of vehicles in congested residential districts.
Playgrounds for children.
Inauguration of the Safety First Forum.
Safety First Scout campaign in the public schools.
Campaign to urge pedestrians to cross streets at crossings and not in the middle of a block.

The success of the plan which has been realized through the organization of the Safety First Society in New York lead to the formation of similar bodies in many other cities and the result of their activities is reflected in the reports which show that there has been a gradual reduction in the number of fatalities in those cities wherein safety first principles have been applied. Reference was made to the record in New York city during the past three years which is considered as a remarkable achievement by city officials and others familiar with traffic conditions in the Metropolis. No reference is made to the constant increase in population or to the enumerous increase in the use of motor vehicles during the periods named.

Decrease 1915 over 1914—55 or

* The Safety First movement in New York was begun in December, 1913. Observe a reduction in the number of fatalities for the succeeding years.

Mr. Elliott took advantage of this opportunity to publicly acknowledge on behalf of the Safety First Society of New York, the splendid co-operation which has been given to the safety first movement in Greater New York by the police department through the activities of Police Commissioner Arthur Woods, Third Deputy Commissioner Lawrence B. Dunham in charge of traffic, Chief Inspector Max Schmittberger, Inspector Thomas Myers of the traffic squad and the fine detail of experienced men under his command. The fire department and the board of health were also commended for the support which has been given to the work.

Another city far remote from New York, which has made remarkable progress in the adoption of safety regulations is Portland, Oregon. In a report just issued by Harry P. Coffin, chairman of the public safety commission of that city and a director of the Safety First Federation reference is made to the fact that only six persons were killed and 187 injured by traffic accidents in the first six months of this year ending June 30th. "The accepted average of deaths in other cities due to traffic accidents is from ten to sixty each month," said Chairman Coffin. Comparison is made to the statistics in other cities on the Pacific coast where there has been no application of safety first rules as for example Seattle, Washington, where the average number of persons killed is seven or eight a month, and in San Francisco, Cal., where the average is eleven or twelve each month.

Mr. Elliott urged upon the police chiefs the importance of securing the co-operation of all civic, social and commercial organizations in their localities which are concerned in the general welfare of the community and suggested that they follow the plan adopted in Syracuse, N. Y., where Mayor Walter R. Stone, acting upon the suggestion of Mr. Elliott in April, appointed a Safety First Commission with Commissioner of Public Safety Walter W. Nicholson as chairman, and former Mayor Alan C. Fobes as vice chairman. This commission serves in an advisory capacity to the Department of Public Safety, and its existence has already proven worth while, as during the past few months a large number of recommendations have been adopted with the view to better safeguarding pedestrians as well as expediting the movement of traffic.

Two years ago Mr. Elliott recommended the appointment of a voluntary Public Safety Commission by the governor to investigate the general use of the public highways, etc. This suggestion met with the approval of Governor Whitman as well as other state officials and leaders of the legislature, and was supported by the State Grange, N. Y. State Association of Horsemen and other organizations. The executive was unwilling to approve of any bill carrying with it an appropriation for even the expenses of the commission, whereupon all efforts to secure the appointments were withdrawn. Since that time the states of New Jersey and Ohio have enacted uniform traffic statutes and it is predicted that similar laws will be in force in many other states within the next year. In the meantime various recommendations which were made by the Safety First Society of New York, have been made effective through the enactment of legislation providing for the licensing of motorcycles and the licensing of all owners of motor vehicles in the state. The law providing for the licensing of all motor vehicle owners was only applicable to residents of the city of New York, the attorney general rendering the opinion that the act was unconstitutional, whereupon Governor Whitman vetoed the bill. Efforts are now being made to draft a new bill to be presented at the next session of the legislature and with this in view a conference will be held in New York city on Friday attended by members of both branches of the legislature, representatives of the city of New York and several associations interested, at which time consideration will be given to the preparation of a new measure which it is expected will be acceptable to all interests.

Mr. Elliott urged the importance of the adoption by the convention of a resolution recommending the enactment of a Uniform Code of Traffic Regulations for the State of New York, in the belief that such action by the Police Chiefs' Association would not only carry great weight with the legislators, but that it would have the unanimous approval of the general public. It is contended that with the splendid statutes of New Jersey and Ohio to serve as a basis for study, that the appointment of such a commission is not now necessary. To off-set this, it is proposed to arrange for a conference of the various officials and organizations interested in this movement throughout the state, this committee to compile a uniform code of traffic regulations incorporating the best features of the New Jersey and Ohio acts and model of the standard code of traffic regulations as adopted by the Safety First Federation of America.

Public safety measures have not kept pace with safety first precautions, according to Mr. Elliott, who emphasized the importance of three essential requirements, first, the adoption of proper and uniform regulations; second, educating the public as well as the drivers and operators of all vehicles to the necessity of conforming thereto; and third, the proper enforcement of such regulations by the local authorities.

ARBOR DAY IN SPAIN.

A Custom That Was Copied From Our Tree Planting Festival.

You are prone to think, since America is the youngest of all the nations, that all our customs are derived from some older people, in whose national life a part of our population had its source. Did you ever hear of an old European country adopting a custom that originated in the United States? When you read of the Fiesta del Arbol in Madrid you are more than likely to assume that it was the tree planting day that gave a suggestion for our annual Arbor day.

Would you be astonished to learn that the Arbol fiesta was patterned directly after our American festival or holiday, when trees are planted by the children of the public schools? That it was copied after our custom is not difficult to establish, for the first festival of this kind was held in Madrid in 1896, having been inaugurated by the young king and his mother. At that time we had been celebrating Arbor day in the United States for more than twelve years.

In that country the event has come to be of real significance, since it is national, whereas in our country it is under the direction of the individual states. Every year the school children are not only commanded to plant young trees, but they are taken to inspect the planting of previous years and are impressed by their teachers with the importance of conserving the forests of their native land. In his first Fiesta del Arbol address King Alfonso announced that the idea was borrowed from the United States, and it was regarded as of so much value that not even the rancor of the Spanish-American war sufficed to interfere with its observation.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When Knights Were Bald.

A certain knight, growing old, his hair fell off, and he became bald, to hide which imperfection he wore a periwig. But as he was riding out with some others a-hunting a sudden gust of wind blew off the periwig and exposed his bald pate. The company could not forbear laughing at the accident, and he himself laughed as loudly as anybody, saying:

"How was it to be expected that I could keep strange hair upon my head when my own would not stay there?"—Exchange.

Just What He Wanted.

"Is your suburb wholesome?"

"No, old chap, it ain't. My wife lost her voice as soon as we moved out here, and"—

The rainiest region in the world is the Khasia hills, 200 miles north of the Bay of Bengal, where the annual precipitation frequently exceeds 400 inches.

Seriousness and Stupidity.

The trouble with being serious is that some people will suspect that you are only stupid. And nine times out of ten they will be right about it.

TROOPS IN TEXAS NOT COMING HOME

Will Remain Until Some Time Next Year in Order to Receive Training—Troops in State May Also be Held—Cooking Problem to be Attacked

That the New York soldiers in Texas are likely to be held there for some time is reliably indicated in the following despatch to the New York Times from McAllen, Texas, dated July 25:

Major Gen. O'Ryan today said that the New York troops would celebrate Christmas and New Year's along the border, and that the period of their stay would probably extend far into 1917. He is authority for the statement that all the units of the guard, except the four regiments designated as home guard, will be brought here for the entire period. The reason for the long stay is to make the guardsmen into first line soldiers, and if the program goes through as outlined it will be the first effective move toward real preparedness, it is said.

The general's announcement had been foreshadowed, but until this afternoon he always had evaded a direct reply It was pointed out today that everything about the camps indicated official knowledge of protracted service, and General O'Ryan finally admitted that the orignal intention to remain here three months had been changed. There will be the stiffest kind of discipline and the guardsmen will deal with conditions identical with those they would incounter in actual warfare.

The troops' general comment on the news may be summed up thus: "No more National Guard for me." The men apparently felt aggrieved because they had thought they were here for service in Mexico and not for extended training. Many however, appreciated the benefit which would accrue to the country if the guard was put on a par with the regulars and while it is believed there will be considerable grumbling at first, the men who protested today always wound up their criticisms with something to the effect that "If it's good for Uncle Sam, it's good for me.

Four More Units Expected.

There are still four units to come down, and it was said today that they too, would be kept here for the entire period The units which are expected are the aero squadron, third heavy field artillery, divisional supply and ammunition trains and the first company of motor trucks.

The motor unit consists of thirty-three big trucks and one automobile and will be used extensively in the mimic warfare. Every arm of the service will be called into use in the campaigns that are to come. One of the manoeuvres which will be gone through includes the summoning by wireless of rescrves from the McAllen camp to the bank of the Rio Grande, where two companies will be reported ambushed. The supporting troops will be rushed over eight miles of cactus country in the trucks

Pay Will be Delayed.

It now develops that the troops who have been counting on receiving their wages August 3 probably will be disappointed. It was said today that the pay system had been paralyzed and the men's wages for government service would be held up indefinitely. One officer went so far as to say it would be at least three months before any of the men received a cent. This will mean a great hardship for the soldiers, as right now there are few of them who have any surplus cash. A five cent glass of lemonade or a newspaper has become a luxury. The system of issuing brass checks, which are redeemed at the camp canteens, has helped some, but by the time pay day arrives most of the men will have spent in advance all the money due them.

Hospital Conditions in Camp.

Criticism of the hospital conditions at the camps, which is said to have been made by Dr. Thomas Darlington, formerly health commissioner of New York, who is here investigating for the National Civic Federation of the American Federation of Labor, caused General O'Ryan to issue the following statement today:

"The camps of the New York division and the rations they eat are satisfactory to the officers and men of the division. I know from extracts which appear in the New York papers, just received here, that the conditions are also satisfactory to Major Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff of the army, who recently visited the camps in company with staff officers, and made an exhaustive investigation of the conditions."

Figures obtained from the official files seem to bear out the assertion that fault finding, as regards the hospitals at any rate, is not altogether unwarranted. Of the 18,000 men here, today's complete report showed that only nineteen men were in hospital. The official percentage of illness among the men since the opening of the camps is given as 12½, which is considered remarkably low. There are about 20 men in hospital, suffering from specific diseases, and they are not included in the computation of the camp average, since their illness can in no way be attributed to any negligence by the guard medical officers.

This bears out the commendation of the medical service given by The Freeman's correspondent at McAllen. His criticism of the cooking, in his letter dated July 19, and printed on Tuesday, is also borne out by the following extract from a dispatch to the World from McAllen:

"More attention is being paid to the question of getting cooks who know something about cooking. John Saveridge has been made cook instructor for the Twelfth Regiment. Mess sergeants also are being named in the Seventy-first."

In view of the plan to retain troops in Texas it is extremely probable that the four regiments left in New York state will also be kept in the service within the state and given training. The rumor that the Tenth Regiment is to go from Camp Whitman to Peekskill, thence to Van Cortlandt Park and later to Montauk seems very plausible and there is good reason to believe that the regiment will be kept in the service for several months.

NO HALT IN SPREAD OF PARALYSIS CASES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 26.—An increase in the number of cases of infantile paralysis, but a decrease in the deaths for the last twenty-four hours were reported today. The number of cases reported was 162 as compared with 150 the previous day and the deaths 35, three less than the day before. The number of cases since the epidemic broke out was 2,260 and the total deaths 682.

A conference of borough chiefs at the health department will be held this afternoon to consider the spread of the disease

SERGIUS SAZONOFF

SAZONOFF RESIGNS; REPLACED BY PRIME MINISTER.

Petrograd, July 26.—Sergius Sazonoff, minister of foreign affairs, has resigned.

He is succeeded by Boris Vladimirovitch Sturmer, the premier, who has taken over the office.

M. Sazonoff was appointed foreign minister in November, 1910. On several occasions since then he has been reported suffering from serious illness, and as his duties in connection with the present war have been most exacting it is possible that his general health has been greatly affected. One of his latest official acts was the signing of the Russo-Japanese convention to maintain peace in the far east.

Boris V. Sturmer was appointed premier to succeed M. Goremykin last February. He also holds the office of minister of interior.

LUCKY GREENSTONE.

It Is Found Only in a Wonderful Mine in South Africa.

Situated in the beautiful Kaap valley, in the Jamestown district of Barberton, Transvaal, there is a mine known by the name of Verdite. The name was given to it on account of the peculiar green stone found in the mine, which is unknown in any other part of the globe. Articles of jewelry and ornaments are made of verdite, and it has been called the lucky greenstone of South Africa.

The greenstone is a silicate of magnesia, or talc, colored green by nature in the course of its formation Other silicates of magnesia may be mentioned here, peridot, serpentine, meerschaum and steatite. The mine, or rather hill, consists of three varieties of talc—green, white and black

But a peculiar fact is that in the black talc there is present pure gold. Some of the finest specimens of gold bearing rock have been found at this mine. Every one knows that gold is found in quartz, pyrites, or even sea water, but scarcely ever has it been mentioned in books that gold exists in talc.

When the verdite rock has gone through the ordinary process of crushing and the gold has been extracted the waste (or what is called the slimes of a gold mine) is used in the manufacture of soap, grease, paint, paper, toilet powders, gas jets, electric insulators, crayons and many other articles of everyday use.

In fact, one might say that everything got from this mine can be used for some commercial purpose.—Chambers' Journal.

Surprising the Bullock.

In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A book, "On the Wool Track," backs the moral with an anecdote.

A team was working on the Broken Hill road, and a bullock—the Beelzebub of the team—had gone obstinate, and the coach was passing. The whip was swinging, and some apt remarks were just forming on the back of the teamster's tongue when he caught sight of a clerical hat on the front seat and just in time thought better of it. He coughed politely.

"Ahem—Strawberry," he said, "proceed!"

To his obvious astonishment Strawberry proceeded.

The Period of Adjustment.

"Why do they say that the first year of married life is almost the most difficult?"

"Because that's the time she has to get used to the fact that he isn't making all the money in the world and he has to adjust himself to the discovery that his little angel has a temper and uses it at times."—Detroit Free Press.

ABOUT HANDBAGS.

Infinite Variety of Styles For All Individual Tastes.

Everywhere one goes the new handbags are most noticeable. Here is a new fashion which has definite variety. No two of them resemble each other. Any woman of taste can design her own handbag and have something personal and unique.

These bags are on the order of the famous pocket of Lucy Lockett—that is to say, they are of the reticule type and hang over the arm by ribbons or chains. They seldom have the gate or silver frame, but draw up through rings or in simple old fashioned style through a fold.

These bags are sometimes knitted bead affairs. A very stunning one often seen is so large one expects to find fancy work inside. It hangs over the arm by long platinum chains. The upper part is of suede leather, the lower part knitted in varicolored stripes. There are also saddlebag shapes which hang over the arm. These are made of dark moire silk, generally heavily embroidered and fringed with several colors of beads. Others are embroidered with steel or silver beads.

One extremely large silk bag has a heavy silver frame The bag part is made of beautiful brocade, often interningled with gold or silver threads and fulled into the silver frame. It is so large and the chain so long that when held over the arm it drops more than halfway down to the knees.

The only sort of arm bag which resembles those carried last season are small shapes, the frames all covered with striped or plain taffeta. These should match the dress worn. The bead frame bags often have little all over patterns of contrasting colored beads

All bags, whether of the reticule or frame bag type, are fitted inside with the usual small mirror, pocket powder puff, etc. A very odd fancy of the moment seems to be to go gloveless. The gloves are buttoned or snapped together at the last fastening and thrown across one end of the bag, saddle bag style It looks very odd to see these white gloves, more or less clean, dangling over the bag.

For a shopping bag the very flat, thin envelope type seems to be the most popular The polished and seal leathers are the most seen, and this bag has generally a leather handle on one side which can be slid along until it is a mere hand strap through which to thrust the hand.

Hand or arm bags show signs of wear quickly, and nothing takes away from a costume more than a shabby bag This new style may be easily fashioned by the girl at home, for the inside of the bag is lined and faced with flat pockets to hold the vanities, which may be taken from old cases and recovered.

Extra Fine Piecrust.

One cupful of lard, two cupfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of salt, one egg and sufficient cold water to hold the mixture together Sift the flour and salt into a basin Flour the blade of a knife and chop the lard into the flour, being careful to keep the flour between the blade of the knife and the shortening. When the mixture looks like meal add gradually the egg, well beaten, and mixed with the lemon juice Roll the pastry into a ball with the knife. It may be used at once, but it will be improved if allowed to stand in a cool place for one hour. This pastry should be rolled out once and handled as lightly as possible Bake in a hot oven Lemon juice makes gluten of flour more elastic, so that dough stretches rather than breaks as paste is rolled out.

BRITISH FREIGHTER BLOCKS SUBMARINE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Baltimore, Md., July 26—The clear channel before the German super-submarine Deutschland was blocked today when the British freighter Highbury dropped anchor just outside the slip where the German undersea boat lies ready to start on her trans-Atlantic trip. The British freighter under the British flag, with her name plate painted over, hurried up the Patapsco and swung with the current just opposite the Deutschland's dock. The freighter blocked the channel in such a way that the Deutschland, in order to get out of her slip would be forced to open up the screen of barges that surrounds her, and go around the freighter in tow of the tug Timmins, lying alongside. The process would take half an hour of time.

The arrival of the freighter and the position she took in the stream aroused a storm of excitement among the German officers and agents in charge of the Deutschland.

The tug Timmins, naval consort of the Deutschland, today left the dock where the submarine is moored, and where the Timmins has been on watch for two weeks. She pulled out into the Patapsco river and headed downstream toward Chesapeake Bay. There were no signs of an immediate move on the part of the Deutschland, but the Timmins's move aroused general excitement along the waterfront where observers for two weeks have expected that a move on the part of the tug would be followed by the departure of the submarine.

It was accepted as possible that the Timmins had left the pier to fill her bunkers with coal, although she has heretofore coaled from barges brought to the Deutschland pier.

WILLIAM SULZER

SULZER SAYS HE'LL RUN FOR PRESIDENT.

Minneapolis, July 26.—William Sulzer, ex-Governor of New York, who was defeated for the Prohibition nomination for president, here, has announced that he has agreed to accept the presidential nomination of the new American party. This party opens its first national convention in Minneapolis on August 1. He was its candidate for governor of New York in 1914.

Saturday Holiday.

The beginnings of the Saturday half-holiday might be traced to an old-time custom among southern planters. "On Saturdays," says Professor Sanford in "The Story of Agriculture," "for either the whole or a part of the day, the slaves were released from field work. . . . In many cases they used this time and Sundays in which to earn money for themselves by hiring out and doing odd jobs. There were many instances in which slaves purchased their freedom and that of their families with money earned in this way."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

There is a good rate of profit to be made in running an incubator, especially where a farm owner is convenient to a city market. The sale of day old chicks is large and profitable, and the broiler trade is equally so.

Turning eggs into poultry meat undoubtedly raises the income on a farm. It pays to buy eggs with which to keep an incubator in operation, but it is generally possible and better to keep hens enough for this purpose, using blooded birds to as great an extent as possible.

So many questions are asked by farmers who are intending to give some attention to poultry that a discussion of the earning power of a flock will be of general interest. It is feasible to employ at least two medium sized incubators, and to keep them in operation a flock of not less than 100 hens will be required. The flock may reach several hundred in number if the owner's taste runs in that direction, and then there will be a large surplus of eggs to sell.

Eggs should not be more than a week old when put in the incubator. It is best to aim at uniformity and have them as fresh as possible. This is accomplished by keeping a flock of a hundred or more laying hens. Even with this number of layers there will be quite a number of eggs to market. A profit of $100 a month is not too much to expect from such a poultry enterprise. It will run more than this where choice fowls are bred, but in the ordinary production of eggs and poultry meat $75 to $125 a month will be the range in cases where the family takes an interest in the business and bestows good care on the chickens. Where there is plenty of land ducks and geese will pay quite well, but they can rarely come up to chickens. People handling poultry on a suburban lot can have the advantage of obtaining stale bread, sour milk table refuse and other food materials at a low price. These articles accumulate in great quantities at hotels and restaurants.

Even farmers who have a large acreage must learn to consider the cost of feed if they are to conduct their poultry plants as business enterprises. It is not economy to use inferior food, but the articles just named are not inferior and will add nicely to the grain, mill stuffs and vegetables which are usually supplied. In nearly all cases it will pay to use a proportion of the rations which are sold by reliable dealers. Culled potatoes, boiled, are good for chickens, and they have little or no market value. They may be mixed with bran or middlings and moistened with buttermilk, skimmed milk or water. Green vegetables are a help to all fowls. Heavy feeding of corn is wrong. Wheat, rye and clipped oats are excellent articles of diet.

Fresh ground bone is an excellent feed for forcing hens to lay, but it must not be old or tainted. The best way to feed it is to mix it thoroughly with equal parts of bran, middlings and cornmeal and feed it once a day, three ounces of the mixture to a bird. Fine ground bone is good for growing chicks after they are three weeks old. It tends to prevent leg weakness. Common sense must be used in not overfeeding with either meat scraps or ground bone. Dry mash may be one-tenth ground bone. Buttermilk has practically the same composition and feeding value as skimmed milk. It is good for laying hens and young chicks as well as for pigs and calves.

When to Cut Clover.

It is time to cut clover for hay when the blossoms begin to turn brown. If there is much to be cut work should be started early to prevent the last from getting too ripe. Cutting in the evening before the dew has fallen or in the forenoon as soon as the dew is off is the best plan.

Clover should be cured in the shade. If it is exposed to the hot sun unless it is frequently turned the leaves dry out too quickly, become brittle and fall off. Raking into a windrow before the leaves become dry and the stems become stiff is a good practice. The windrow shades most of the clover and allows a good circulation of air.

The great amount of sap in clover stems frequently causes one to overcure. Much sap can be left in the stems and the hay kept in good condition.—Minnesota Station.

THE STARS AND STRIPES.

First Carried by Troops in Battle in the Mexican War.

The American flag collections of the United States National museum in Washington include some interesting examples of our flag, indicative of its development in several historical periods, its many changes and its gradual standardization.

It is interesting to note that during the Revolution the flag had thirteen stars; in the war of 1812, fifteen; in the Mexican war, twenty-nine; in the civil war, thirty-five; in the Spanish-American war, forty-five, and today, forty-eight. The American flag is among the oldest of national flags, being older than the present British union jack, the French tricolor and the flag of Spain and many years older than the flags of Germany and Italy, some of which, like those of other countries, are personal flags, or those of reigning families.

The history of our flag indicates that the "stars and stripes" was not carried by troops in battle until the period of the Mexican war, 1846-7, though we have record of its use as a garrison flag from about 1787 or 1798 to 1834. Bodies of troops carried during this period and before it what was known as national colors or standards of blue with the arms of the United States emblazoned thereon, comprising an eagle surmounted by a number of stars, and with the designation of the body of troops, as infantry, artillery, etc., inscribed on a scroll.

In 1834 the artillery were given the right of carrying the stars and stripes as recorded by the war department regulations, the infantry and cavalry still using the national arms with an added scroll in the eagle's beak bearing the words "E Pluribus Unum." These flags remained the colors of the infantry until 1841 and the cavalry until as late as 1887, when they were ordered to employ the stars and stripes.

FANATICS IN THE ORIENT.

In Persia Religious Maniacs Are Regarded as Saints.

It appears there are places, where lunatics are not shut up and kept away from the rest of the world, but are revered as saints.

This is the queer state of affairs that exists in some of the interior cities of Persia, according to an oriental traveler named Fetter, who tells interesting tales of mentally deranged men who are looked upon in the light of wonderful beings.

One particularly crazy man, according to Mr. Fetter the craziest man he ever saw or heard of, does nothing all day long but race up and down the streets of the city crying out at the top of his voice:

"Ah! Ah! Ah!"

Mr. Fetter says that this is not a temporary form of madness, for the man has kept it up for twenty years or so. He started it when he was still a young man, and his idea, of course, is to venerate the name of the god he knows by ceaselessly shrieking his name.

"Every one venerates this lunatic," says Mr. Fetter. "The richest men in the city have presented him with rare gifts. One of them gave him a horse and saddle, and with that he gallops through the streets when he is not walking. He is privileged to break up any kind of meeting or assembly, and all stop and listen to his cries as long as he is of the notion to stay in their midst.

"At his death a huge monument has already been promised, on which will be carved the word 'Ah;' so it will tell to generations to come the story of the man who spent the best years of his life and all of his waking hours shrieking the name of the deity he worshiped."—Exchange.

How "Abide With Me" Was Written.

At the age of fifty-four Lyte found himself doomed to die of consumption, and in sorrow at having to leave his task unfinished he prayed that at the least it might be granted to him to write something which would live to the glory of God when he was dead. Then on the last evening he ever spent at Brixham, after preaching his farewell sermon, he took his pen and, as the sun was setting over the ships that lay in the harbor, "Abide With Me" was written. Next morning he started for the Riviera and there died a month later.—London Telegraph.

It Was All Over.

Molly, the new girl, was one of those heavy handed creatures who was forever dropping or breaking things. Hearing a crash of glassware one morning, her mistress called in a resigned voice from the next room: "Well, Mollie, what are you doing now?"

"I ain't doin' nothin', mum. It's done," replied the treasure.

POULTRY

PORTABLE HOUSE FOR NESTS

Fowls Not Permitted to Lay in Poultry House Proper—Cleaning Is Very Small Task.

"I have always had my hens' nests in the poultry house and when the mites began to trouble them it was a hard task to have to scald, disinfect or whitewash the entire building, so I planned to have portable nesthouses, not allowing hens to lay in the poultry house at all. Cleaning these houses is such a small task it need not be dreaded," writes Mrs. L. E. Armour of Pleasant Hill, La., in Progressive Farmer. "Every portion of them can be easily reached. Then they can be placed under a sheltering shed during winter and under cool, shady trees in summer.

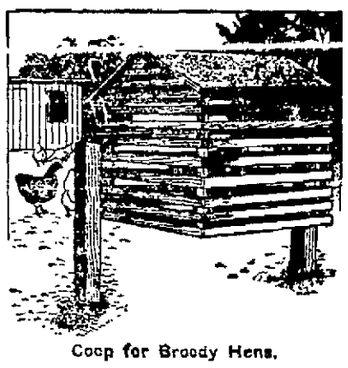
"They are built on posts 4 feet high and are 12 feet in length and 3 feet wide. There are two rows of 12 nests, one on each side of the door. A single 12-inch plank forms the floor of the hall between the nests. Eight-inch planks form the wall behind the nests. The roof is made of four 12-inch planks, two on each side. The ones just above the rows of nests are hinged and are opened upward.

"Besides lightening the work of mite fighting, these houses have dark nests, which all hens like, and are good protection against nest-robbing dogs. A short ladder at each door is necessary for the hens to get to the nests."

TO DISCOURAGE SITTING HEN

Rocking Coop Will Force Fowl to Roost on Center Shaft—Quick Results Are Assured.

"The device consists of a coop made of lath about two feet square and swung on a shaft set a little above the center so that most of the weight will be below the shaft on the lower part of the coop. The ends of the shaft are set on posts about three feet above the ground. It is impossible for a hen to sit on the slatted bottom, and if an attempt is made, the rocking and tipping of the coop will soon make her seek a more stable support, and the only one within the coop is the shaft passing through it; and the most persistent broody hen is usually glad to roost on it the first night," writes Benjamin R. Bush of Bay Shore, N. J., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.



Coop for Broody Hens.

"When hen has perched two nights she may be considered cured. This coop will accommodate three or four hens without crowding and insures quick results."

FOR SUCCESS WITH CHICKENS

Not So Much Depends on How Many Are Hatched as Upon What Percentage Are Raised.

Success with chickens depends not so much on how many are hatched as upon what percentage is raised. The cold rains we have had recently found many early hatched chicks ready prey. An accident rather than acute reasoning once placed us in possession of what we consider the very best way to save the life of a chilled, wet chick. There were so many soaked at one time that we simply could not wrap them separately or place them in the oven. A pan of very warm water on the range prompted the man of the house to suggest dipping the chicks as he had dipped small pigs. For lack of anything better, we tried it, dipping the chicks and wrapping up several together in flannel cloths. It worked like magic. The warm water seemed to affect them much quicker than dry clothes or moderate heat would have done. Since then, we've restored young chicks so far gone we doubted they had any life left in them.

ANIMAL PROTEIN FOR FOWLS

Buttermilk Is Considered One of Best Forms—It Should Be Fed in Stoneware Vessels.

Buttermilk is one of the best forms of animal protein to be had and on account of its cheapness in the next few years it will become a very common feed in the poultry yard. You can get it at most local creameries at one cent per gallon. It should be fed in stoneware vessels.

The WOMAN'S PICTURE

An Unusual Episode of Life on the Border

By GORDON RAY YOUNG

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

I raised my hands.

There was no word spoken. The revolver and behind it the masked face of the highwayman were enough.

For the first time in my life I realized how people felt when they gazed at the muzzle of my gun and trembled before the black mask that I wore.

I remember that I wanted to laugh. The humorous side of the situation appealed to me. I was being held up!

I, Hugh Richmond, whose purse did not contain so much as the value of one gold piece, but whose body, dead or alive, was worth $5,000.

I know that I smiled, and I could see that my smile was disconcerting; therefore I knew that I was face to face with an amateur. I cared little for being held up. In fact, I rather enjoyed the situation.

"Pleasant day," I ventured.

The gun made a terrific report, and the bullet whizzed dangerously close. After such an answer I kept my lips closed.

My highwayman did not seem to know what to do next, and we sat on our horses at a bend in the mountain road and looked at each other. The first motion he made I knew that he wanted me to dismount, but I pretended not to understand and wrinkled my brow as though puzzled.

"Climb off," came in a faint whisper.

Then I was puzzled. It was not the hoarse whisper of one who had lost his voice. Of a sudden I understood. My amateur highwayman was more frightened than his victim. He could not even manage his voice. I determined to take advantage of him.

In those days I was a good horseman, and I was mounted on the wisest little mare that ever kicked up dust in a sheriff's face.

Gently I touched Dolly's flank with a spur and, keeping my hands aloft, made her plunge from side to side, guiding her with my knees until we were several yards away.

I lowered my hands, leaned forward, chirped in Dolly's ear, and away we flew.

Bang, bang, bang! All of his shots went wild.

An hour later I smiled to myself and tried to imagine the astonishment that would seize Mr. Amateur if he knew that his revolver had caused Hugh Richmond to lift his hands.

There wasn't a sheriff in Colorado that didn't want me. I was wanted on so many charges that I had lost track of them myself.

I only knew that no man—"no, nor woman either, though by your smile" was my friend.

I sprawled in the sunshine, as I often did, and let my thoughts wander.

At such times I would think of the faces of men and women I had known long ago, and of all those faces there was but one I remembered with tenderness, and that dear, sweet little girl believed that I was dead.

I was worse. Society had driven me out.

Solitude is pleasant enough when you grow tired of the city and are wearied by the restless clatter of industry, but I longed—I actually craved the company of a human being.

But I could have no friends. I knew if I made any sooner or later I would be betrayed, and the horror of horrors that oppressed my mind was that I might be taken alive.

THE HUMOROUS SIDE OF THE SITUATION APPEALED TO ME. I WAS BEING HELD UP!

From where I was it was not far to Pinon, and in Pinon—well, there were people—a dance hall, music, the clatter of voices and the sound of oaths, a ghastly resemblance of a pleasurable life that I had known long ago and in another section of the world.

It was quiet in the Silver Dollar when I rode up, casually glanced at the men in front of the saloon and entered. There were only two or three people in the place. To sit in that hot saloon, reeking with odors that at other times would have been offensive, was now a pleasure.

"At such a place you meet and see many kinds of people—the vicious and the good gone wrong, who incidentally make up the great percentage of the outcast element; the bad and would like to be bad, the braggart and the hero, faro dealers, rough handed miners and disjointed cowboys.

An hour after I sat down a young man with lily hands entered. I knew him for a gambler or a tenderfoot, and when he placed himself before the tin pan piano and began banging a selection from "Il Trovatore" I knew that he was a newcomer and shifted my chair to get a good look at his face. He was a handsome lad, one of the poetic type.

"Hey," I shouted softly and in ridicule, "desist from such atrocities."

He looked at me in amazement.

"You know that piece—you—you!" And his last word had an altogether different inflection. He was startled and from saucer like eyes stared at me.

My first thought was that I had been trapped; that he recognized me as Hugh Richmond.

"What's the matter?" I demanded.

No answer.

"Tell me. What is the matter?"

There was a ring in my voice that he did not disregard, and he answered in a whisper, "Nothing."

That whisper! He was the amateur highwayman.

We had met again, and I liked the boy. My impressions are not always correct, but they are positive, and if I take a dislike to a man at first sight I would distrust him though we were seated side by side in heaven.

But this lad, this mere youth, this unsophisticated child of the east, who had no better sense than to attempt highway robbery and three hours later inflict music on his victim, touched my sympathy.

"Well?" I spoke half defiantly because I wanted to make him talk.

"We never met before," he stammered, coming toward me with the reluctance of one approaching a judgment seat.

"Never," I answered emphatically.

As he sat down I pushed the bottle toward him, and he grasped it eagerly.

"Good stuff," he lied politely.

"Damnable," I rejoined.

"But I think it is good," he insisted and took another glass of the liquid fire.

"How long?"

"Three weeks," he replied, embarrassed. "I am a tenderfoot, the rawest kind and well blistered."

"How long?" I queried again.

"God knows. I don't want to stay any longer than I can help."

His tongue had been loosened. Three large jolts of whisky—such whisky as comes over the bar of the Silver Dollar would have loosened the tongue of the Sphinx—and before I realized what was happening he was rapidly whispering into my ears his tale of sorrow.

"I was in a social set that was too high for my purse," he said. "My family was proud, my name was an open sesame to the exclusive set, but my income was small. My employer trusted me. There is a woman in the case.

"Heaven, such a woman! I am not worthy of her. It was not her fault. And I wish that I could get a start over again, but I've hit the trail for her, and yet she loves me. I couldn't let her know that I was poor, and I showered her with presents, just as the other fellows did that wanted her to love them, but she turned them away.

"She loved me, do you hear? I gave her everything that money could buy, and then the crash came.

"My own father turned me out of the house. My own mother wouldn't let me kiss her goodby. My employer—he was an old friend of the family—said he wouldn't prosecute, but I was disgraced. The papers had it.

"And then she—she of all women—said that she loved me and always would and said that she was as much to blame as I because she had allowed me to spend money on flowers and take her to the theater—most of the money went for that; but, of course, there was a ring.

"She told me to go west, to go out where money was dug from the ground and fortunes made in a day and to get enough to settle my accounts, and then we would go to some place else and begin life all over again.

"And here I am. But what can I do? How can I dig gold out of the ground? I know nothing about it. There's nothing I can do. I'm bad—bad all the way through. My father told me I was. So what's the use? I don't care for myself, but for her—for her."

Tears rose in his eyes, and he cried: "If I could only get a start again for her! I'd slave my life away just to make her happy, for she loves me even after all that."

He drew a small picture from his pocket, kissed it again and again, then laid it on the table and gazed intently at the sweet, childish face.

I glanced at the picture casually, rose, gripped the table, then sank back, staring into the face of the boy, who failed to notice. I knew her—oh, how well I knew her! And all that he said was true. I glanced around the saloon. It was early. Men were just beginning to drop in. There we sat, the boy and I, men from the far, far east, and each had been driven out, he as the result of a faithlessness to a trust and I—no matter why I came.

There we sat together, he a youth and I a man, and before us lay the picture of a woman whom we both loved.

The boy had fallen across his arms on the table. At first he sighed, and then his heavy breathing told me that he was sleeping. I fell into a reverie.

I had no money. All that I could get hold of went east, passed through the hands of a lawyer and then to— But she never knew whence it came. She believed what the lawyer told her, and he didn't know the truth.

Still the boy slept.

I speculated on the amount he owed and glanced about the room. I touched him on the shoulder. No answer. I shook him, and he raised his head drowsily.

"How much do you need?"

He was not fully awake.

"Come on; wake up." And I shook him again.

"What do you want?"

"Come on outside. The fresh air will do you good," I said.

We went out.

"Look here, laddie, I came out west several years ago and struck it rich. I like you, and I know that there is not a streak of bad in you. Now, if I lend you the money will you go back and be a man? When you get on your feet you can pay it back; no hurry, though."

"Would I—would I? Oh, heavens! Then I could go back like a man and be a man. You must be an angel in disguise!"

"Have you a horse here?"

"No."

"Well, take mine—over there." I selected the best one in sight—that is, next to Dolly. Explanations at that stage of the game would have been embarrassing.

Then I gave him directions as to how to ride, and told him to make haste.

"I'll be along pretty soon—in about an hour—but I want you to go now. I will have to go back and find a couple of friends and borrow a few dollars to make up the amount. I could get it tomorrow, but I want to see you started back east tomorrow morning. It will be a long ride, but I guess you are good for it, even if you are a tenderfoot."

I DREW BOTH GUNS INSTANTLY AND ROARED, "HANDS UP!"

He wanted to wait and come with me, but I made him ride off.

Then I went back in. It was a risky proposition, and such a desperate chance that even now I have strange twitching about my heart when I think of it.

There were noise and laughter. The tin pan piano was going its utmost; excited gamblers were plunging heavily at faro bank, and several men were at the bar, when I placed my back to the wall, drew both guns instantly and roared:

"Hands up!"

The confusion became silence.

Some turned to the door, bent on taking a chance, but thought better of it, and up went their hands. The bartender hesitated for a moment, debating whether or not to drop behind the bar, but he caught my eye and obeyed.

In less time than it takes to tell I had plundered the faro bank—and a goodly roll it was—and asked the bartender to step aside while I emptied the till. He gave me a smile, and I knew by that smile that he was a dangerous man.

I backed to the door, knowing that the moment I stepped outside a fusillade of shots would be sent in my direction. I turned, made two jumps and was astride of Dolly and pounding down the road while the wicked crack of a Winchester troubled my ears. I glanced over my shoulder and could see the white apron about the shadowy form that stood in the doorway. The bartender was a dangerous man, but I had been born under a lucky star.

"What's all that shooting about?" the boy asked when I overtook him a couple of miles farther on.

"A little altercation over a poker game. Come on; we'll have to ride fast if we make that station in time to catch the morning train."

After pushing our horses hard and talking but little we arrived at the station the following morning just as the train whistled in the distance. Its faint roar grew nearer and nearer until, with a mighty rush, it was upon us and the brakes were grinding and creaking.

"If I only knew how I could repay you—I will, but I would like to express my thanks now, and words won't do it," he said earnestly as he gripped my hand.

"You can—and fully—for all time."

"How? Tell me how. I will do anything."

"Give me that picture of"— and I called the sweet faced girl by name.

He reached in his pocket and handed it to me. Again we shook hands. He stepped on the train, and slowly it moved off, and then faster and faster until it was out of sight.

I stood staring after the train and wondering what he would think when he remembered that he had never told me her name—for she was my daughter.

ADVERTISEMENT WRITING.

"I'VE spent a lot of money on advertising without getting results," is the complaint of the merchant who does a lot of talking in newspaper space without "saying something." He doesn't realize that GOOD advertising has wrapped and twisted itself around the very heart of business. And he's the man to whom my advertisement writing service would prove highly remunerative. He should write or 'phone me for my reasonable terms. George M. Bellows, care of The Kingston Freeman.

DAY'S DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Washington, July 26.—Senate met at 10 o'clock.

House in recess until tomorrow.

Senate resumed consideration of army appropriation bill.

SUBMARINE GETS A DREADNOUGHT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin via Sayville Wireless, July 26.—A British dreadnought has been torpedoed by a German submarine off the Scottish coast, says the following official statement given out by the Admiralty today:

"A submarine on July 20 off the British naval base of Seipa in the Orkney islands attacked a British dreadnaught and obtained two torpedo hits."

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. George Van Anden celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home, No. 78 Main street, on Tuesday, the occasion also being the birthday anniversary of their son, Frank Van Anden. Friends were present to assist in the celebration from Naugatuck, Conn., New York city, Brooklyn, Poughkeepsie and Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Van Anden were the recipients of many gifts of gold, silver and china. All present spent a most enjoyable evening and left wishing Mr. and Mrs. Van Anden many more years of happiness.

Schreiber-Lawler.

Miss Margaret F. Lawler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lawler of Connelly, and Peter J. Schreiber of the same place, were quietly married in St. Peter's Church this afternoon at half after four o'clock, the Rev. Father Neumann officiating. The ceremony was solemnized on the thirty-sixth anniversary of the wedding of the bride's parents. The bride was beautifully gowned in pussy willow taffeta, trimmed with Duchess lace and wore a veil caught with a bandeau of pearls. Her bridal bouquet was of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Florence Bechtold, who was charmingly gowned in turquoise crepe de chine, with cap of the same fabric, and Miss Anna Schreiber, sister of the groom, who wore a handsome costume of pale blue crepe de chine, with cap to match. Both young ladies carried pink and white carnations. James J. Lawler, brother of the bride, acted as best man, with P. Lawler, also a brother of the bride, as usher. The wedding march and other appropriate music was played by Prof. Schwalbach, organist of the church. After the solemnization of the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Connelly, which was attractively decorated with midsummer flowers. Following an elaborate collation, Mr. and Mrs. Schreiber, who were the recipients of many beautiful and valuable wedding gifts, including checks for a considerable amount, left for their own newly furnished home in Connelly, where the groom is engaged in business. Among those present at the wedding were guests from Hoboken, New York city and Albany.

STORM PUTS OUT ELECTRIC LINES

Honk Falls Line Out of Commission and Current Furnished From Local Generating Plant—Other Wire Service Impaired.

The heavy rain storm of today interfered greatly with all wire service. The telegraph line was not working properly, and the telephone system was more or less impaired, while the Honk Falls power line went out of commission, seriously interfering with the work of local concerns, and especially with the work of getting out The Freeman. All of the machinery in the plant being run by electricty, the shutting down of the power for fully one and a quarter hours this morning accounts for the peculiar appearance of tonight's paper, and the difference in the sizes of type, the printers being forced to go back to the days of Ben Franklin and set type by hand.

Inquiry at the office of the Kingston Gas & Electric Company developed that it was not known positively what had caused the trouble but that the company had three gangs of men working along the line trying to locate the trouble. The local power house on East O'Reilly street was started up when it was seen that the Honk Falls line was out of commission, and all of the concerns downtown were supplied from the local power house. Uptown was not supplied with electricity.

If the electric company had not started the local power house running there would have been a still greater delay in supplying electricty to the downtown section of the city. As it was, the company did all in its power to make good to its customers and is entitled to full credit for its prompt and effective work.

BURGLARS BUSY AT PINE HILL

Cottage Occupied by Postmaster Deyo Entered While the Family Slept and Goods Taken—Suspects Held at Oneonta.

Burglars entered the cottage occupied by Postmaster S. R. Deyo of this city at Pine Hill Tuesday night and after ransacking every room except that occupied by Mrs. Deyo, carried away their loot without awakening anybody. Later they entered the cottage occupied by Miss Mandelbaum near Highmount but ran away when Miss Mandelbaum, who was awakened, called out.

Postmaster Deyo, after disrobing inside the house, sleeps on a porch. The burglars entered the cottage through a window into the room in which Postmaster Deyo's clothing was. Taking the keys from the pockets of the clothing, they went through the house, taking between $25 and $30, an overcoat, cuff buttons, a hypodermic syringe, and other articles. They left no clues.

Tuesday two strangers in an automobile were seen around Pine Hill. A description of them was sent out and today two men answering the description were arrested in Oneonta, where they are being held for identification. They say they were on their way from Kingston to Syracuse, having come here from New York.

ABOUT THE FOLKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Ennist of Green street are spending a week at Lanesville in the Catskills.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 26.—Market movements at the opening today were disappointing to those who had expected that the news on United States Steel would be an incentive for vigorous buying. There was an urgent demand for Steel Common, with the crowd in that stock large and first sales were recorded as 15,000 shares at 86⅞ and 86¾, with 100 shares selling at 87, against 86 at the close yesterday. In the next few minutes the stock was supplied freely, causing a recession to 86⅜. At that point the tone became firmer. The remainder of the list generally made substantial gains on the initial trades, but before the end of the first fifteen minutes stocks were offered at concessions all around the room. Tennessee Copper was again the weakest feature and after opening ¾ higher at 24, dropped to 22¼. Republic Iron and Steel and Colorado Fuel and Iron both started substantially higher, but receded. Marine Preferred opened up ⅝ at 86¼, and then yielded to 85⅝. Industrial Alcohol opened at 107¼, a gain of 1¼, followed by a reaction to 105½. The copper stocks moved in the same way, Anaconda showing an advance of ⅝ to 79⅝ on the first transactions and then reacting to 78¾. Studebaker started 1¼ higher at 127½; Crucible Steel 1⅛ higher at 69½; Maxwell Motor 1⅛ higher at 81⅛; Lackawanna Steel 1½ higher at 71; Baldwin a point higher at 58½, and fractional advances were recorded in many other stocks in the war order group.

Less attention was paid to the trading in Steel Common in the late forenoon, when business in that issue fell to small volume. The price receded to 86⅛. Business in the remainder of the list was also small. The railway issues, with the exception of New York Central, were fractionally lower. Continued selling of Industrial Alcohol forced the price of that stock down to 102½. Mexican Petroleum sold at 96¾, against 98 at the close yesterday. The war order stocks lost all their early gains, Baldwin Locomotive declining a point to 70, and Crucible Steel 1½ to 68. American Car and Foundry sold at 56⅞, against 57½ at the close yesterday. Maxwell Motor dropped to 79½. Money loaning at 2¼ per cent.

"Bear" activities ceased shortly after noon and with the absence of offerings the supply became scant, and advances were easily effected. Steel Common rose to 86½ and Reading moved up to 94¾. Many of the specialties scored smart gains, with Industrial Alcohol the most prominent, rising to 107¼.

The market closed heavy. After a vigorous rally the leading stocks were again under pressure and at the close were near the lowest range of the day. Reading and Union Pacific were supplied at concessions on the attention attracted to the railway labor situation. Steel Common sold down to 86⅛. Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

A. W. Reynolds Temple, No. 28, Pythian Sisters, will hold a lawn party on Thursday evening, July 27, at the home of Mrs. George Green, No. 13 Wilbur avenue. All members and friends are invited to the affair. Ice cream and cake will be served. Should the evening be stormy, the lawn party will be held the next pleasant evening.

Florentine Council, Knights of Columbus, of Poughkeepsie, will pay a fraternal visit to Kingston Council, No. 275, next Monday evening, coming by special boat. It is expected that nearly six hundred members of Florentine Council will make the trip. The committee of arrangements of Kingston Council has completed plans for the reception of the visitors at the Knights of Columbus club house on Broadway.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Heinrich A. C. Altenstein died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Christian [illegible], at Sawkill, on Monday night. The remains were taken today to Weehawken for cremation.

Mrs. Patrick Dodd died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Moran, at New Paltz, on Saturday, aged 75 years. The funeral was held Monday with interment at Rosendale.

The funeral of Mrs. Granville Boice will take place from the Krumville Reformed Church on Thursday afternoon at one o'clock. The service will be conducted by the Rev. Mr. Thompson and the Rev. Mr. Beekman, formerly of Rosendale. The interment will be in the Krumville Cemetery.

Caroline, wife of Frederick Zimmerman, who has resided in Poughkeepsie for the past twenty years, died on Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Isaiah Terwilliger, in that city, aged 96 years. The funeral services will be held on Thursday at the Ohioville chapel, with interment in New Paltz. She is survived by five children, Oscar, Charles and Fred Zimmerman, Mrs. William Kieser, New Paltz, and Mrs. Terwilliger of Poughkeepsie. Before removing to Poughkeepsie she was a resident of Ohioville and New Paltz.

Two More Arrests.

Under Sheriff Hornbeck today arrested Orby Purdy and Lewis Harrison at East Windham, on a warrant charging them with being mixed up in the Woodstock and Zena chicken and wagon stealing affair of Sunday night.

He Saved Time.

An English weaver who had spent two or three years in America was paying a visit to the old mill to see some of his former workmates.

One of them said to him: "I hear it's all hustle and bustle in America. In fact, you 'aven't time to eat."

"Hustle and bustle," said the visitor. "Why, when I left here I spelt my name 'Mirrill,' but now I spell it 'Merrill.'"

"How's that?" asked his friend.

"Because," replied the Americanized one, "I haven't time to dot the 'I's!"—Exchange.

Curious Old Clock.

In the tower of the town house of Heidelberg was an old clock so constructed that when the hours struck the figure of an old man pulled off his hat, a cock crowed and clapped its wings and soldiers fought with one another. But this curious piece of workmanship, with the castle and town, was burned by the French in 1693.

It Won't Harm the Pigs.

An Effect of A Cyclone

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I walked into Topeka, Kan., one morning and was entering a hotel when a man in the doorway looked at me with a growing expression of astonishment on his face. I could not understand why he regarded me thus, for I did not remember to have ever seen him before. I passed into the hotel. Persons were moving about, none of whom interested me or I them, till I ran up against another man, who looked at me with the same expression as the man I had met in the doorway. As he passed me I turned and looked back at him and saw him looking back at me.

Not ten minutes after this a hand was clapped on my shoulder, and a voice said:

"Jim Donegan, I want you!"

This third surprise was a clew to the others. Quite likely I resembled a man who was wanted for crime or perhaps supposed crime. I certainly never broke a law in my life.

True enough, both the men who had looked at me in surprise swore that I was Jim Donegan, who a few days before was caught red handed in a robbery, but got away. The only thing about my case that seemed to puzzle my accusers was that I should openly show myself in Topeka. But when I denied that I was Donegan they concluded that I was bluffing.

While I was being taken to jail one of those Kansas cyclones came up and cut a swath right through the town, taking in me and my captor. What became of him I don't know to this day. As for me, I was blown against a tree box and clung to it till the storm had passed, which involved only a few minutes. What especially interested me was to make good my escape from those who had mistaken me for some one else. I was fearful lest my captor would get his hands on me again. Perhaps, considering the damage that had been done by the storm, I magnified my own importance. Nevertheless I thought of nothing but re-arrest.

Holding to the path of the cyclone, I ran like a deer till I came to a house with a hole in its side so big that I could walk right through it. There was a bed inside that looked very inviting for a tired man. I was not tired, but it occurred to me that it would be a good place to hide. So I jumped into bed and covered up, all except my eyes, resolving that I would pretend to have been killed by the cyclone.

I had not been in bed long before a pretty girl came in and, seeing me, ran out crying:

"Who in the world was in bed in the spare room when the storm came?"

A woman, a young fellow about seventeen years old and a little girl came into the room. I lay staring at the ceiling, pretending to be dead. It seemed to me that this was the only way to avoid answering questions as to how I came to be in bed in a strange house.

"He's not dead," said the girl who had discovered me. "Don't you see the color in his cheek?" I concluded that it would be better to play injured. I groaned and lowered my eyes to the group bending over me.

"Where am I?" I asked.

"How in the world did you come to be here?" exclaimed the woman in a tone of amazement.

"Don't you remember anything?" asked the girl.

"I remember being taken up by a wind and landed somewhere, but when I stopped I lost consciousness." Then looking in assumed wonder at the open side of the house, "Can it be that I was blown through there?"

I asked them if they couldn't cover up the opening and let me stay there till I felt able to go somewhere else. They got blankets and tacked them up between me and the outside. Then they asked me what else they could do for me. I told them that I would prefer to be let alone for a time till I could collect my faculties, declaring that I felt bruised all over. They suggested that some bones might be broken, but as this would involve an immediate examination I said my bones were all right. The girl said that though she could understand how I might have been blown in at the aperture she couldn't understand how I could have been blown into bed and covered up. I said that just before they had come in I had felt a sensation of cold and had doubtless pulled the covers over me.

"Do you remember tucking yourself in?" asked the young lady.

I paid no attention to what was plainly a sarcasm. I was well tucked in, for I had got under the covers without throwing them down.

Well, I played "safe" long enough to send for my brother, dreading all the while that the house would be searched for me. Had I seen the damage that had been done I would not have feared so much for myself. A strip of the town several hundred feet wide had been wrecked and many persons injured. The house I was in had been badly damaged, though no one was hurt.

I left with my brother after dark and didn't visit Topeka again till I had ample proofs of my identity. Then I went to see the girl who asked me if the storm that had landed me in bed had "tucked me in." I told her the whole story and asked her if she had believed my explanation. She said she hadn't, but thought I had been so badly frightened by the cyclone that I had got into bed without knowing what I was doing.

RAIN PUTS STOP TO ROAD WORK

Rain today put a stop to all road repair work in Kingston. The work of repairing the Strand has been greatly delayed so far this season by rain storms, and today no work was accomplished. Considering the weather conditions the work has progressed at a fair rate of speed. The uptown force of street employes have been busy for some time repairing Prince street and vicinity. The board of public works early in the season laid out considerable work on the streets, but it is hardly likely that all of the work planned will be done this season.

CLINTONDALE.

Clintondale, July 26.—Mrs. John Chatfield and daughters, Miss Stella Chatfield and Mrs. John Tracey of New York city are visiting Mrs. Susan R. Lawrence.

Mrs. Roland, with her son and two granddaughters of New York city are visiting her daughter, Mrs. Graham Gerald.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Graham Gerald on Friday afternoon, July 28.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sutton and son, William, of New York city are visiting Mr. Sutton's mother, Mrs. Wallace Thomas.

Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Ammerman of New York city and Miss Sones of Connecticut are expected to take part in the music in the Pentocostal Church of the Nazarene on the coming Sunday. The pastor will preach at the morning and evening service.

Mrs. Lozier is entertaining at her summer home, Rest-A-While, Mrs. Graham and daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. William Deyo and Mr. and Mrs. Perry Deyo of New York city are stopping with Mr. Deyo's sister, Mrs. Nathan Ackhart.

The Methodist Church will be closed of all services for the next two Sundays.

Mrs. Maggie Kniffin is visiting her sister, Mrs. Parker, in Brooklyn.

Several from this place attended the funeral of Captain Van Wagner at Highland on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. William Holley and friends of Newburgh spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Judson Thompson.

To Appeal Apple Tree Case.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke).

New York, July 26.—Statistics covering the first half of the 1916 season effectively shoot to pieces John McGraw's idea that "scientific baseball is bunk."

Jawn ol' boy, has come right out in the open and spoofed the sacrifice hit and the hit and run game, yet the figures show that the teams that have used the sacrifice hit oftenest have been those that have been close to the top rung of the ladder all season.

Peculiarly enough, the very same plays which McGraw declares are "foolishness" have been largely responsible for many of the defeats which the Giants have suffered this year. Almost immediately after John got through telling the populace that the sacrifice hit game wasn't worth a darn, the Brooklyn Dodgers came along and beat the Giants two games by using the very same plays Jawn, ol' boy, had called "bum stuff."

Fohl Advocates Scientific Baseball.

The Cleveland Indians are an excellent example to prove the value of the sacrifice-hit game. With a team regarded by most baseball persons as little more than mediocre, they have kept near the top in the American League heap for more than three months. And the sacrifice hitting has been largely responsible.

Lee Fohl, manager of the club, is one of the greatest exponents of the sacrifice and the hit-and-run game. The Indians, as a result, have made more sacrifice hits than any club in either big circuit. And those same Indians, with a club admittedly weaker than the majority, have been in the fight all the way.

The statistics which appear below were compiled by William Chase Temple, donor of the Temple Cup. They embrace all the games played by each club in both leagues up to and including July 6th. They show the number of hits each club required to score a runner, the total sacrifice hits and stolen bases by each club. Also, at the extreme right, is a column which shows where each club stood in the pennant fight on July 6th.

Here Are Figures.

National League.

Club	Hits per Run	S.H.	S.B.	Standing July 6th
New York ..	2.13	54	84	5th
Chicago	2.18	93	57	4th
Boston	2.20	72	51	3rd
Phil.	2.24	72	54	2nd
St. Louis ...	2.30	59	78	7th
Brooklyn ...	2.32	78	73	6th
Pittsburgh ..	2.34	76	79	6th
Cincinnati ..	2.42	72	74	8th

Total 1,925 runs, 4,365 hits, 577 sacrifice hits and 547 stolen bases in 534 games; average hits required to score runs 2.26.

American League.

Club	Hits per Run	S.H.	S.B.	Standing July 6th
New York..	1.87	74	93	1st
Cleveland ..	1.90	121	66	2nd
Detroit	2.08	82	81	6th
St. Louis ...	2.09	85	90	7th
Washington ..	2.12	79	82	5th
Chicago	2.18	90	71	4th
Boston	2.21	82	66	3rd
Phil.	2.51	60	68	8th

Total runs, 2,101; hits, 4,417; sacrifice hits, 673; stolen bases, 617; average hits required to score run, 2.09.

Explaining Red Sox and Dodgers.

Those who peruse the above tables will find that with one or two exceptions the clubs that showed poor sacrifice hitting records, together with low base-stealing marks, were well down in the standing of the clubs. Also they will note that teams which did not have good baserunners or a multitude of sacrifice batsmen had to make more hits per run than did the other clubs.

The Boston Red Sox, and Brooklyn Dodgers stand out as the exceptions. They rank near the bottom in baserunning and in sacrifice hitting. It required 2.21 hits per game to score a run for the Red Sox and 2.32 hits per run for the Dodgers. Yet the Sox, at the time, were third in the league standing, while the Dodgers led the Tener Circuit.

How then did both teams rank so high in the standing of clubs? The pitching staff of each is the answer. The Red Sox hurlers, as a whole, rank as the best in the American; the Dodgers are leaders in the National. Their pitchers don't need a lot of runs to win.

Give them two or three and they'll breeze through to victory. That is why the Sox and Dodgers, are so high in the race.

If a team has great defensive power in the box, as have the Sox and Dodgers, they don't exactly need a superfluity of sacrifice hits and stolen bases. But how much higher would both those clubs be if they played scientific baseball as have the Indians?

Hot Liners.

(By Frank G. Menke).

The Yankees started their western trip by being smothered by the White Sox. However as the Red Sox were downed by the Indians the gap between the two teams was not lessened, but the other teams crept up on the leaders.

Speaker's hitting had much to do with defeating his old team mates. The former Red Sox outfielder is certainly doing all he can to bring a pennant to Cleveland.

Matty's debut as manager before his old friends was put off on account of the weather. Looks as if it will again be put off today. One feels like swearing at the weather man these days.

The Cubs are trying hard to get in the running. They defeated the Braves but took eleven innings to do it.

The Browns batted in six runs in the second. The Athletics never figured after that.

The Nationals could not hold a four run lead with the Tigers, and Jennings's crew sent in the winning run with three singles in the ninth.

HURLEY.

Hurley, July 26.—Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Houghtaling, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. TenEyck and Mrs. William Wyness went to Asbury Park by automobile the early part of the week and returned the following day, excepting Mrs. Hotaling and Mrs. Wyness, who remain a few days longer.

Mrs. Henckel and Robert of New Jersey are at Mrs. Maxon's.

Mr. and Mrs. Berkle of The Bronx, New York city, are at Mrs. Markle's.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, Miss Wilcox and Ernest Wilcox are spending the summer vacation as usual at Mrs. Brink's.

Miss Roberts and Mrs. and Miss Miller of Brooklyn are also at Mrs. Brink's.

Mr. and Mrs. Brownlow and Curtis Brownlow, who have been stopping at Mrs. Markle's, have returned to New York city.

There are good fish in the creek; Mr. TenEyck brought home a fine string lately, bass and pickerel.

Grant Smith went to Derby, Conn., on Saturday to visit his son, Levan, who is in business there.

Miss Ruth Vredenbergh, who has taken a special course in Christian Endeavor work in Kingston, held an examination lately in the village church in Christian Endeavor special work. A number took the examination and all passed well.

John P. Roosa is putting up a wind-mill in New Paltz.

Malen Hotaling is erecting quarters on the Walton place by the Binnewater, for the use of the boy scout camp there.

Mrs. Daly of New York city, who as Miss Buchanan taught school here in the village, is now the proud mother of a son.

Mr. and Mrs. George P. DuMond have taken the Peter DuMond house for their residence.

Mrs. Palmer and her daughter, Marian, are spending the summer with her parents at the Stauble homestead.

The surveyors have been measuring out our road and street; may it mean an early start on building the long looked for improvement.

WHEREAS, a serious epidemic of Poliomyelitis, commonly known as Infantile Paralysis, is now extant in the city of New York, and spreading to other communities, and

WHEREAS, it is reported that two cases of such disease have occurred within the town of Plattekill, from which death has resulted.

NOW THEREFORE, pursuant to the power vested in the Board of Health of the town of Plattekill, by virtue of Section 21 of the Public Health Law, and by virtue of the other statutes in such case made and provided.

BE IT RESOLVED AND ORDAINED—

First.—That it shall be the duty of the head of every private family or household, and to the proprietor or keeper of each hotel, boarding house or lodging house in the town of Plattekill, to report immediately to the local health officer, the names, addresses and ages of all persons who have come, or who shall hereafter come from or presumably from without the town of Plattekill into the said town, or who are visiting, boarding, lodging or residing in such place under their charge.

Second.—That all persons who shall hereafter come within the bounds of the town of Plattekill from without the bounds thereof, for the purpose of visiting, boarding, lodging or residing in such town, shall subsequent to their so coming within the bounds of the said town, remain and be isolated from the general public upon the premises where they may be visiting, boarding, lodging or residing, for a period of at least three weeks; and all such persons shall be prohibited during such period aforesaid, from visiting any other premises or places or from attending any theater, moving picture, opera house or any gathering or assembling within said town, or from attending any Sunday school, church, excursion, picnic, entertainment or other gathering, or from visiting any ice cream parlor or place or store where ice cream, soda water or other beverages or articles of food are sold, or dispensed.

Third.—No children under the age of sixteen years shall be permitted in any theater, moving picture house, opera house or other place of amusement within the said town, and all gatherings, assemblages, excursions, picnics and entertainments of children under the said age, are hereby prohibited within the said town, and all children within the said town under said age are forbidden to attend any Sunday school, church, excursion, picnic, entertainment or any other gathering.

Fourth.—That it shall be the duty of the head of every private household and of the proprietor or keeper of each hotel, boarding house or lodging house within the said town, to immediately report to the local health officer, the illness or sickness of any person who shall be visiting, boarding, lodging or residing in such place, or under their charge.

Any person who violates this ordinance or order shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars ($50), or by both.

This ordinance shall be published twice each week for three successive weeks in the Kingston Daily Freeman and in the Kingston Daily Leader, and copies thereof shall be posted in at least ten conspicuous places within the bounds of said town, and this ordinance or order shall be effective immediately after the first publication thereof.
